Abstract of LLCS-2020

Thematic and Narrative Standards in American Cinema: An Analysis on Character Arc, Catharsis and Audience's Bias

David Sunil

Sivananda Sarma RV Memorial College, Karnataka, India

Abstract— Movies and TV series are a visual medium, that are intended to evoke the sensory root of vision and the auditory system. The niche, in the cinematic and the television medium is not the mere presence of a story and the subsequent plot attached to it but it is the culmination of expert writing, character arcs (of all the characters) in the movie and TV series, the cathartic experience of the protagonist/antagonist and the plot that builds up to a boiling point which has nowhere to go other than to ingrain in the psyche of the audience. The cinematic and television masterpiece that demands further analysis by critics, which becomes the standard on which many other movies and TV series are made, is not without its own flaws. In spite of said existing flaws, there seems to be a glaring indication that the movie and TV masterpiece has the above qualities mentioned in order to fulfil its place as the 'movie of all movies' or simple put cinematic materpeices. For the sake of brevity and convenience, let us call the criteria in which every movie must be judged as writing, character arc, catharsis and plot or 'WCACP' analysis, for short. Critically acclaimed movies (Christopher Nolan's moveis) and television series (Breaking Bad) have an unparralled depth in them that other modern movies or TV series simply fail to match, baring a few exceptions like Francis Ford Coppola's The Godfather Trilogy (1972-1990), Brial De Palma's Scarface (1983), all of Martin Scorsese's movies, Stanley Kubrik's movies such as 2001: A Space Odyssey (1968), The Shining (1980) and Dr. Strangelove (1964), Orson Welles's Citizen Kane (1941) and the 'master of suspense' Alfred Hitchcock's movies such as Psycho (1960) and Vertigo (1958) to name a few. The aim of this paper is to formulate a link between the biases of the audience as well the struggle of the directors and the writers in producing a work of art, being cinema. The audience's reaction to a particular genre of movies and TV series as well as the category of audience that the writers and directors focus on is a key aspect to dwell deep into.

Keywords— Audience psyche, catharsis, character arc, cinematic medium, plot, writing.

Richardson's Pamela: Predicaments to Handle in Pamela's Marriage

Gassim H. Dohal, Ph. D.

English Teacher, Gizan, Saudi Arabia

Abstract— In this presentation, I will tackle some social elements that we can learn from Richardson's Pamela. Well, many things in this masterpiece are promising that Pamela and Mr. B's marriage will be successful; e.g. the change of Mr. B's behavior towards Pamela. Yet, we have to consider the social backgrounds of this couple, the marriage across class-line and age-line, as well as Mr. B's jealousy.

Indeed, both Pamela and Mr. B have many good virtues that will enable them to have a happy marriage life. At the same time, we shouldn't ignore those enigmatic barriers that they have to handle and be aware of. These obstacles will be of different natures; social, educational, psychological, etc. These barriers may take place in any marriage case; hence I will tackle these barriers as presented in the novel, hoping that this way will shed light on lessons readers may extract from Pamela.

Keywords— Richardson, Pamela; or, Virtue Rewarded, marriage, Mr. B, Pamela.

Toward an integral approach in the assessment and diagnosis of language disorders

Abstract— The present work consists in a general exposition, from a comprehensive vision, of the three main levels, necessary to take into account when carrying out the study of language disorders –both innate and acquired- from a neuropsychinguistic approach. A tiered approach would facilitate the understanding of the different components that are part of the linguistic processing system (LPS). The development of a neuropsychinguistic model, which considers both neurobiology –at least from a referential point of view- and verbal behavior -through the studies carried out in experimental linguistics-, based on a main axis, formed by the different cognitive processes -both basic and complex- that constitute the support of cognitive activity and, mainly, of the LPS, would respond to an innovative proposal –although not necessarily new- that would allow covering a large part of the needs at the time of carrying out the evaluation, diagnosis and rehabilitation of the different linguistic alterations. Its antecedents and its applied importance will be reviewed, starting from a possible proposal, and of projection towards the future, emphasizing and delimiting the necessary criteria for its approach in the field of clinical practice.

Keywords— Neuropsychinguistics, language disorders, linguistic processing system, cognitive neuropsychology, evaluation, diagnosis, rehabilitation, pedagogical innovation.

Ernest Hemingway's a Farewell to Arms: A Tale of Love against the background of War

Dr Mayurkumar Mukundbhai Solanki

Assistant Professor of English, Growmore College of Engineering Himatnagar, Gujarat, India

Abstract— Hemingway's A Farewell to Arms has autobiographical elements that reveal the author's life story. Lt. Frederic Henry, the narrator, tells the story of his love affair with Catherine Barkley, a nurse in the hospital. Being an eye witness and served as a soldier during World War I, Hemingway seems to favour humanity, love and peace in the novel. He considers the war as futile and venomous for mankind. Hemingway himself passed through upheavals of life but there was a little hope to get love in life. Love brings liveliness to man's life. Plato considered love as the solution to all the problems. This paper is a sincere effort to evaluate Hemingway's A Farewell to Arms as a tale of love against the background of the war.

Keywords— Love affair, peace, World War I, humanity ,futile, solution.

Reflections of Sufi Elements in the lore of Jalaluddin Rumi: A High Standard

Sonia Chadha*, Dr. Parul Mishra

G.D. Goenka University, Gurugram, Delhi, India

*Corresponding author

Abstract— Rumi might be first Preacher of Sufism to foster a spirit of unity among all human being and people all over world designated the moral message. Through his piece of literature he delivered a message of aspiration, devotion, adoration, brotherhood, amity, understanding, charity, peace and tranquility in entire universe. He had broken the linguistic boundary and created a high standard of poetry. Sufi is a path of purity and by following it a person gets pure from the lore of his heart. Rumi being the follower of Sufi emerged in the period when religious chaos was on its crescendo and he being illiterate presented his dogmas weave in words to maintain serene and peace.

The purport of this paper is to root out Rumi's Poetry edifice with a higher pennon. This could happened not because of compassion and tolerance but he put an exemplary atmosphere where these high values were upheld, he created a decent way through opening the door to dialogue through his simple message. He indeed was one of the perfect representatives of such a complete human one and considered one of the greatest teacher or deacon of universal love and peace. In Middle East and Western Asia Rumi was always a matter of attraction that was a major figure which had left an everlasting impact on wide variety of people because of simplicity and appealing words of choice. Even after eight century since his death his presence still astounds the western world. Sama or Fana so forth are well associated with his name and canonized him for his huge success. But in true sense he himself illuminated whole universe like Northern Star whose presence in sky means a matter of proud. This is in case of Rumi excessively. Sama or any act related to his name is a step ahead from his time. Such themes fabricated by him for whole humanity in a dignified way, undoubtedly Rumi upraised and designed a high standard of literature which is still peerless and inequitable.

Keywords— High standard, Inequitable, Sama, Sufi elements, Whole humanity.
