State Buys Furnishings Without Bids

The Legislature's Sergeant-Arms, John C. Cavanaugh of Hingham, said early today about $250,000 of furnishings for the House and Senate without competitive bidding. But he said bidding wasn't necessary.

are being installed, in the tioners, have been installed or

The furnishings, ranging from ashtrays to air conditwo chambers and in offices.

Cavanaugh, who works through the Joint Rules Committee, said the committee and the sergeant-at-arms' department "are immune from bidding procedures in some areas."

"I haven't done anything illegal," he said. "I checked with the Comptroller's Office, and they always told me when to bid and when not to bid.

"Most of the furnishing or refurbishing didn't have to be put up for competitive bidding."

Sen. Pres. Donahue said he sent a letter to Cavanaugh two months ago, advising him to conduct public bidding. He added that he hoped Cavanaugh had followed his advise.

Cavanaugh said he did receive the letter from Donahue.

"And we did bid on a certain number of desks and chairs to furnish offices for the senators," he said. "It wasn't necessary, but we did because it was the president's wish."

Stadium in Lexington?

By GARY KAYAKACHOIAN
Staff Reporter

Cambridge and Lexington Thursday became the latest communities to be mentioned in the Greater Boston stadium site guessing game.

On Monday night, the Cambridge City Council is expected to receive an offer of more than $2½ million for 100 acres of land in the Cambridge reservoir area.

There are almost 600 acres at the site which could be used for a stadium.

Waltham real estate man Robert K. Pederson says he represents a group of property owners who want to sell their land in Lexington for a price in excess of $2 million.

A syndicate headed by William Lincoln of Newton wants to erect a privately financed sports plant in the Lexington area, Pederson said.

Pederson states there are 150 acres in Lexington off Rte. 2 near Spring st. and the Raytheon headquarters, which are open for development.

Although the Lexington planning board is lukewarm, Chairman Roland Greeley has urged Lincoln's organization — Commonwealth Stadium Associates—to conduct survey on Rte. 2 to determine what the impact would be when cars leave Rte. 128 for the proposed Lexington stadium. The study also would cover a mapped-out plan to route the huge volume to and from the area.

Pederson said Lexington would get $500,000 annually in taxes from the stadium proposition.

The Lexington planners will hold a public hearing shortly to sound out residents and officials. On June 12, the annual Lexington town meeting will be called to approve a zoning change permitting the stadium.

Pederson pointed out that the Lexington location is superior to the controversial state commission selected tract in Weston. He also said the South Station area could not handle the thousands of cars.

Bretta Blast 'Stab in Back,' Say Cambridge Belt Foes

A Cambridge citizens committee leading the fight against the proposed Brookline-Elm st. Inner Belt accused Somerville Mayor Lawrence F. Bretta Thursday of stabbing them in the back.

Bretta on Monday urged the Department of Public Works to stick to the Brookline-Elm route, and he expressed his opposition to an alternate Portland-Albany st. plan favored by the committee.

Rev. Paul McManus, head of the three-member Citizens Advisory Committee appointed by Gov. Volpe last October to come up with an alternate route, declared his group is "appalled" by Bretta's statement.

"It's a stab in the back," said Fr. McManus, pastor of St. Mary's Church. The meeting was at the Blessed Sacrament Catholic School.

"His attitude shows a callous disregard for human values.

"The Brookline-Elm route he espouses would evict 400-500 families in Somerville, and 1200-1300 families in Cambridge.

"The Portland-Albany route he criticized would take only a few homes in Somerville and about 150 in Cambridge."

Fr. McManus charged that Bretta was more concerned with the fate of a proposed industrial park for Somerville than he was with the eviction of residents.

He said he and fellow committee members Robert Goodman and Denis Blackett showed Bretta "how the Portland-Albany route would save hundreds of homes in Somerville, but he was indifferent to this."

The Portland-Albany route, designed by a nationally recognized traffic engineering firm, "is a road that would work," Fr. McManus contended.

"It would take almost no housing in Somerville, yet would serve the industrial park perfectly."

Grand Jury Reported Hearing Gangland Murder Evidence

Evidence in at least two gangland murders reportedly is being presented to a Suffolk grand jury which was convened Thursday under extraordinary security measures.

Investigators and prosecutors declined to discuss the case since it is a grand jury matter but there were strong rumors at the Pemberton sq. courthouse that the presentation involved the growing number of underworld killings.

The grand jury had been scheduled to report Monday but was called to duty two days early to receive a number of routine cases.

Then, after unusual security measures were taken, the grand jury reportedly began to hear evidence concerning the gangland murders.

While court officers and a policeman were stationed at the doors to keep the curious away, the first of a group of 41 witnesses appeared before the jurors.

The witnesses used a back elevator rather than the usual routes to the grand jury room.

The cases reportedly were being presented by two of Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne's top prosecutors, Ralph Bernard and John F. McAuliffe.

There were reports that the presentation of evidence would continue into next week.

Due to the large number of witnesses, courthouse attaches had difficulty finding enough rooms to keep some of them separated.

Dist. Atty. Byrne's action came three days after disclosure that two rival figures in the underworld had been transferred from State Prison at Walpole to separate institutions.

On Monday, Joseph Baron, 34, alias Joseph Barboza, was moved from Walpole to the Barnstable House of Correction for what Byrne said was the safety of Baron "and others."

Dlring the previous week, Ralph Lamattina, 44, alias Ralph Chong, a reputed Cosa Nostra member, was transferred from State Prison to the Norfolk Prison Colony.

Hub Group Raps School 'Plums'

The Citizens for the Boston Schools attacked the Boston School Committee for the creation of 19 new administrative "plums" that will add $244,000 to the proposed school budget.

The top "plum" in the $59.2 million 1967 school budget, charged the Citizens group, is a $21,000 job for an associate superintendent for public relations.

"An associate superintendent for public relations?" asked Supt. William Ohrenberger, "I've never heard of the job."

Ohrenberger said he knew "nothing about the other new jobs. I can't comment on something I know nothing about," he added.

According to the Citizens group, there will be six assistants to the associate superintendent for public relations at $11,000, six instructional directors at $11,000, and six administrative assistants at $10,000 each.

The Citizens also charged that the new proposals will mean the addition of many clerical assistants for the assistants.

The 1967 school budget—$8 million more than last year's —was recently subjected to an unprecedented hearing by a committee appointed by Mayor Collins.

The committee will make recommendations in about a week for cuts in the current proposed school budget.

$750 Pay Hike (State Paid) for Teachers?

The State Senate Thursday adopted an amendment under which 43,000 school teachers in Massachusetts would receive a hike of $750—paid by the state.

The amendment offered by Sen. William I. Randall (R-Framingham) would have the state reimburse cities and towns for the extra $750.

Sen. Kevin B. Harrington, Democratic floor leader, said that this would cost the Commonwealth an additional $32 million and that this money is not available in the state budget.

Randall's rider was added to a bill which would hike minimum wages for Massachusetts' teachers from $5000 to $5750.

The rider reads: . . . "the Commonwealth shall reimburse each city and town for each teacher so employed, except persons in training and employed as temporary substitute, in the amount of $750."

Without the rider many communities would not have been affected since they now pay more than the proposed $5750 minimum.

Harrington moved reconsiderattion and the bill will be on the Senate calendar again Monday.

STATE FINALISTS in the Miss Ingenue reader model search sponsored by Gilchrist's are, from left: Sheila Harrigan, Stoneham; Nancy Fox, Sudbury; Sally Day, Cohasset; Patti Cohen, Lowell; Edythe Chalifour, Andover. Winner will be named May 31.

So. Station Trade Center Gets Commitee OK

Legislation to provide for a $60 million trade and transportation center to be built and operated by the Massachusetts Port Authority in the South Station area received a favorable report Thursday from the committee on State administration.

Sen. James A. Kelly Jr., (D-Oxford), committee chairman, said the bill included a provision that the Port Authority, within five years of passage of the act, pay the State $13 million owed for the Mystic River Bridge.

Kelly said that if the Port Authority could afford to borrow $60 million for the South Station center, "it can pay its debt to the Commonwealth."

The bill includes provision for payments in lieu of taxes by the Port Authority to the City of Boston.

The National Picture

Another surge of winterlike weather is pouring down the eastern slopes of the Montana Rockies.

Snow is piling up. A locally heavy fall is expected along the northern and eastern slopes of the Montana mountains.

The cold wet weather is widespread. Stockmen's warnings have been issued southward into Utah. Rain fell across the northern Pacific Coast to Central California.

An unseasonable chill continued Thursday night to grip the midwest and northeast and plunged southward. Frost or freeze warnings were in effect over most of the midwest and scattered frost was predicted south into Georgia and Alabama.

But warm southerly winds are flowing up the plains and this warming will spread to the east today.

National outlook today: Sunny skies will dominate most of the nation east of the Rockies. It will be warmer from Texas across the midwest to the Ohio Valley. Showers and rain will prevail from the northern and central Pacific Coast to the northern plains with snow in the high elevations. And it will be turning colder in the central and northern Rockies.
