SAYS BAUMES LAW WON'T CURE CRIME

Dr Plant Prefers Method of Baker Foundation

Head of Newark Juvenile Clinic Addresses Social Workers

The growing tendency of States to follow New York in enacting laws carrying practically life sentences for habitual offenders "is not good social engineering," Dr James S. Plant told 600 social workers and friends at the meeting of the Judge Baker Foundation yesterday in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

Dr Plant, now director of Essex County juvenile clinic, Newark, N J, received his early training in Boston with the Baker Foundation, and praised in generous terms its work and Dr George P. Healy at its head.

New York's adoption of the Baumes law drove some of the worst offenders to New Jersey, and when Jersey enacted a Baumes-like code Pennsylvania began to suffer and followed suit.

Less Effective Way

"So it goes," said Dr Plant, "and it is all clear proof to me that this method of approach is infinitely less effective than your Baker Foundation method of studying child delinquency, its causes and the correction in individual cases, on which method ours in New Jersey is patterned. Passing Baumes laws is not the cure—it is merely a passing along of the problem for some other community to solve.

"The delinquencies of children and of young adults are not important in themselves. The important thing is to discover the cause or combination of causes for the delinquency. Ascertaining these, social agencies, such as the Baker Foundation, seek to remove them and to change the environment of the individual involved so as to bring out that individual's better side.

"The aim of this new social philosophy is not to suppress crime by severity in punishing it. The aim is to find the bottom reason, whether it be physical or mental, for the delinquency, and to remove that influence from the life of the subject or else change the subject's response to that influence.

Remove the Cause

"In all cases of maladjustment to a normal, wholesome life, the aim of thoughtful folk is to comdemn the futility of looking at youthful delinquency as in itself a thing to be punished. Their aim is rather to find out what this mere sympton is grounded on, and to remove that cause for the delinquency.

"In years to come this preventative system will save millions of dollars to taxpayers in funds now laid out for insane hospitals, for prisons, for pauper institutions, for police."

Judge F. B. Cabot of the Boston Juvenile Court told its dependence upon the cooperation of the Baker Foundation in performing this invaluable service of analyzing the mental processes of delinquents so as to determine the first causes of a boy's or a girl's "going wrong."

"Critics who complain that our system is softening and weakening the law because of too common resort to the probationary method are well justified, I should say, after hearing some of our judges talk.

"Some judges think that to grant probation in a given case is an act of leniency or forgiveness. Actually it is nothing of the kind. While the defendant is on probation he is usually under Baker Foundation influences to bring the defendant back into step with society and a proper attitude toward the duties which defendant owes to society. In short, you can't run the court without the aid of the Baker Foundation."

Mrs Robert F. Herrick presided.

RE-EXAMINATIONS FOR POLICE PROMOTIONS

Some Did Not Understand Physical Ratings

In a statement given out yesterday afternoon Civil Service Commissioner Elliott H. Goodwin said:

"In view of the allegations made of unfairness in the recent physical examinations for promotion to sergeant and lieutenant of police on the ground that the candidates were not notified that the percentage obtained in the physical examinations would enter into the general average mark on the entire examination, the board voted that reexaminations would be allowed to all candidates desiring such reexamination on Thursday and Friday of this week."

The recent physical examinations resulted in 37 failures in the lieutenant examination and 40 in that for sergeant.

Continuing, Mr Goodwin says:

"Such re-examination, by order of the board, is open to those who passed the first physical examination as well as to those who failed, but with the understanding that in both cases the percentage received in the re-examination, whether it be higher or lower than that in the previous examination, shall rule.

"Candidates for re-examination who fail to pass the physical examination shall appear in room 17 in the State House for re-examination on Thursday, May 23, at 9:30 a m.

"Candidates who passed the physical examination, but who desire re-examination in order to better their standing, shall appear in room 17 in the State House for re-examination on Friday, May 24, at 9:30 a m.

"The present eligible lists will stand suspended until corrections resulting from re-examination have been entered."

FOUR BRICKBOTTOM HOUSES PADLOCKED

Orders Against Six Others Go Into Effect June 7

Taking the first step in the official padlocking of part of the Brickbottom District of Somerville, officers yesterday locked up four buildings for the period of one year, under a decree of the Superior Court. Decrees for the padlocking of six other places will go into effect June 7.

The places padlocked by the authorities yesterday have figured in raids. The first property visited was at 14 Medford st, owned by Maria Rose Restuccia. Under the decree the basement and first floor of the building were padlocked, the remainder of the building not being affected. No one was on the premises when the officers arrived.

Next the officers went to the one-family house at 42 South st, owned by Joseph Lassaro. It was vacant, as was the next place, a one-family house at 48 Hunting st, owned by Marcello Zizzino, was occupied by the family of Francis Kaluklewicz and notice was served that the place must be vacated at once.

The places against which a padlock decree has been issued to go into effect on June 7 are 50 Warren st, owned by Aida Lombardi; 220 Somerville av, owned by Salvatore Ciano; 7 Joy st, owned by Pasquale Reale; 42 Medford st, owned by Antonio Grassia; 34 Ward st, owned by Maria de Vella; 196 Somerville av, owned by Umberto Biancanano.

The padlocks were placed in effect by a group consisting of Asst Dist Atty Frederick A. Crafts, who has been handling the Brickbottom cases; Deputy Sheriff J. Fiske Lord, Lieut Charles J. Sharry of the Somerville police, and Sergt Martin W. Joyce, in command of the State Police Patrol group which has been stationed in Brickbottom for nearly a year.

AUSTIN GREENHOUSE, INC. BEGUN NEAR WINDSOR, VT

WINDSOR, Vt, May 21—The increase in the number of hard-surfaced roads is resulting in the establishment of new enterprises in rural districts of New England. One of the most recent of these in this section is the Austin Greenhouses, Inc, which was started three miles from Windsor village after the new road from Windsor to Ascutney was built, connecting the States of Vermont and New Hampshire.

The chief stockholder, treasurer and guiding spirit of this enterprise is Herbert W. Austin, for several years a horticulturist at Lexington, Mass, for the past 15 years a resident here and until last Summer in charge of greenhouses at the Vermont State Prison.

The greenhouse, which was built last year, is mainly devoted to carnations. Another, now being erected, will be filled with roses. Both greenhouses and gardens are supplied with an abundance of water which comes, in the case of the greenhouses, from a large reservoir on Ascutney Mountain, and for the gardens from the Connecticut River.

TARR HITS GROUPS OPPOSING DRY LAW

Says Some Spread Doctrines Amounting to Treason

One of Speakers at Cambridge Women's G. O. P. Club Meeting

Such movements as those of the Constitutional Liberty League and the Communistic Labor Union in the spreading of doctrines relative to the liquor law were bitterly denounced by Frederick Tarr, United States district attorney for Massachusetts, at the annual meeting and luncheon yesterday of the Cambridge Women's Republican Club in Riverbank Court Hotel, that city.

One of several speakers, Mr Tarr told the 120 members present that any person who spreads these doctrines is "a traitor to the institutions of this country and an absolutely disloyal citizen."

He commented on the Constitutional Liberty League and its views on the liquor situation and the abolishment of the prohibition law. He told of the Communistic newspapers preaching similar doctrines and the attempts of the Communistic Labor Union to break down the American Federation of Labor and other conservative labor organizations.

Mr Tarr said that, in his own opinion, prohibition is an admirable experiment and that he thought the amendment will be a success. "While it is part of the Constitution," he said, "it is the duty of the citizens to obey it."

The efforts of President Hoover and Gov Allen in the carrying out of Republican ideals were highly praised by Atty Gen Joseph A. Warner. He said that he rejoiced at President Hoover's appointment of the commission to study the dry law and declared that the Attorney General and the district attorneys in Massachusetts were doing all within their power to cooperate in the Presidential design.

Amos Taylor, chairman of the Republican State committee, rapped the Republicans who did not vote for President in the last campaign.

Other speakers, introduced by Mrs Anne C. M. Tillinghast, president of the club, were Hon Gaspar Bacon, president of the Senate; Senator Clarence Kidder of Cambridge, Mrs Nathaniel Thayer, national committeewoman; Mrs Francis R. Batchelder, vice president of the Republican State committee; Harold M. Bradbury, former Representative, and Hon Esther Andrews of the Governor's Council.

Mrs Tillinghast was reelected president. Other officers named were Mrs N. Russell Caxmay, vice president; Mrs Charles Hathaway, second vice president; Mrs Cora M. Wright, treasurer; Mrs Gertrude M. Steele, recording secretary, and Mrs Ralph Hamilton, corresponding secretary.

No one could be found who had seen the accident.
