BRICK BOTTOM HEARD FROM.

On Somerville Avenue, in the Brick Bottom District, Somerville, stands a tenement house with a midit door, and within the house a tenant is swearing vengeance against his landlord. William Fay is the tenant's name, and when he locks up his premises at night and saws the door fast by six inches or more of meeting the lamb, leaving an opening which will allow the free passage of dogs and cats if not of larger marauders, his wrath increases. He declares that he will seek satisfaction in the courts, and this morning will appear before Judge Story and make complaint against John Higgens, the owner of the house, for alleged forcible entry, he carrying off the forced door at the time.
