The Paris Agreement only applies to Parties which have ratified it. No developing country should be excluded from receiving financial support for its enhanced Climate Change Actions, from the Adaptation Fund, GEF or GCF or other mechanism under the Convention. The processes must be inclusive, transparent and Party-driven; as established in the Convention. Climate finance must be provided by developed countries with transparency and clarity on the amounts and conditions. The implementation of the Paris Agreement shall not replace or rewrite the Convention. Our priority must be to preserve the Convention in the face of the uncertainty of the current situation, as there are future scenarios in which the Convention, which has already been approved by all, is the thing we might have to fight climate change.
