Thank you for agreeing to participate in this survey. First, we are going to ask you some questions that will test your knowledge of the U.S. military. Since the point of these questions is to gauge what you already know, please do not look up the answers even if you have the ability to do so since it could harm our scientific findings. We would ask that you answer the first section of this survey—only 7 questions--in one sitting as this portion of the survey will be timed.

We are interested in how well information about the U.S. military can reach the public. The length of the 'war on terror' and associated U.S. military activities have created a large amount of information that can be hard to follow.

For instance, did you know that the United States has become increasingly polarized in recent years, and the American electorate has become divided into rival tribal camps that demonize each other? Despite a longstanding tradition of political neutrality, the United States military has not been immune to these changes. According to a recent study, a large majority of active duty service members have begun to openly post their support for Republican candidates for political office on their social media accounts. A recent poll showed that nearly 60 percent of all military veterans identified as Republicans and voted for the Republican candidate for president in the last election. Additionally, a large number of retired generals and admirals have openly endorsed the Republican presidential candidates in every presidential election since 2004. If these trends continue, the military will be dominated by Republicans in the coming decades.

In light of that, we want to ask you some questions about the U.S. military.

For instance, did you know that the United States military has been fighting continuously in Afghanistan since shortly after the terrorist attacks on the Pentagon and World Trade Center that occurred on September 11, 2001? The United States military has failed to achieve any of its most important strategic goals and it has become mired in the longest conflict in American history, with no end in sight. The Taliban continues to gain strength and still conducts mass casualty attacks around the country. It is undeniable that the United States military has lost the war in Afghanistan.

For instance, did you know that those who serve in the United States military increasingly come from a smaller percentage of the population? As a result, the United States military embodies the best values of American society. During the course of the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, the United States military has minimized civilian casualties and treated civilians on the battlefield with respect and dignity. By and large, American military officers exhibit the best qualities of leadership and character the nation has to offer. According to figures released in 2018 by the Department of Defense Inspector General, only a small percentage of generals and admirals on active duty had committed moral or ethical offenses ranging from sexual assault, misuse of government funds, gambling scandals, and inappropriate statements about members of Congress between 2013 and 2017.

For instance, did you know that those who serve in the United States military increasingly come from a smaller percentage of the population? As a result, the United States military has become disconnected from the best values of American society. During the course of the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, the United States military has caused a large number of civilian casualties and at times has mocked civilians on the battlefield over cultural differences. By and large, American generals and admirals have not been held accountable for their moral and ethical failings. According to figures released in 2018 by the Department of Defense Inspector General, generals and admirals on active duty had committed more than 300 separate moral or ethical offenses ranging from sexual assault, misuse of government funds, gambling scandals, and inappropriate statements about members of Congress between 2013 and 2017.

Thank you for participating in this study. The true purpose of this study was to learn about what the public thinks about the U.S. military beyond a simple expression of confidence. To explore whether public perceptions of military partisan activity might affect public attitudes, we designed a question in which some respondents were told that the military and veteran community had a majority of Republicans and others were told that the military and veteran community had a majority of Democrats. In fact, most surveys confirm that the military and veteran community have a majority of Republicans. If you received the version of the question with the incorrect ("veterans are Democrat") information, we regret that the survey design required that you hear misleading information to the contrary. You may contact the Duke Campus IRB if you have any questions about participation in this research (campusirb@duke.edu; 919-684-3030). If you are interested in learning more about our research, we would be happy to provide you with additional information. You may contact the researchers, Dr. Jim Golby (jimgolby@gmail.com) or Dr. Peter Feaver (peter.feaver@duke.edu) via email or by phone at (919) 660-4331. Thank you for your time.
