Chapter 1

Introduction

The dataset `commons_candidate_campaign_spending` contains information on UK House of Commons candidates, constituencies, and campaign spending from 1885 to 2019. This codebook describes the dataset.

The dataset comprises the complete universe of parliamentary candidates from 1885 to 2019. Each row in the dataset pertains to a parliamentary candidate in a particular election, and the variables contain constituency- and candidate-level information.

A long list of prominent scholars have collected historical data on UK House of Commons elections and made it publicly available. This project builds on their work, either directly or indirectly, but extends it in at least three important ways.

First, the dataset contains detailed, candidate-level information on the level and composition of campaign expenditure for more than 99.7% of all general-election candidates. In addition to information on the level of permitted spending, the dataset documents how how much money each candidate allocated to advertisement, campaign managers, staff, public meetings, facilities, miscellaneous matters, and personal expenses.

Second, the dataset includes candidate identifiers that track individual candidates over time, even if they change name or constituency. These identifiers are constructed using various sources of biographical information.

Third, the dataset includes constituency identifiers that track constituencies from one boundary change to the next. These identifiers are constructed on the basis of historical maps and detailed descriptions of constituency boundaries.

Chapter 2
