Access to the Supreme Court Building

In light of the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, and the resulting concern for the health and safety of the public and court employees, public access to the Supreme Court Building is now restricted to persons having business with the Supreme Court. While documents may be hand delivered for filing, persons making those filings will not be permitted beyond the lobby of the Supreme Court Building. Until further notice, the Supreme Court Library is closed to the public.

At the current time, no change has been made to the oral arguments scheduled before the Supreme Court at the end of March and in April. If any change is made, the parties will be notified and a notice will be posted on this website.
