MVC Further Extends Expiration Dates for Commercial Driver Licenses, Learner Permits

TRENTON – The New Jersey Motor Vehicle Commission (MVC) today announced the expiration dates for all valid New Jersey commercial driver licenses (CDLs) and commercial learner permits (CLPs) that expired on or after March 1, 2020 have been extended to December 31, 2020.

In addition, medical certifications for valid CDL and CLP holders have been extended, dependent on expiration dates.

Medical certifications that expired on or after March 1, 2020 but before June 1, 2020 have been extended until October 31, 2020. Medical certifications that expired on or after June 1, 2020 have been extended to December 31, 2020.

“Commercial drivers are essential for keeping our economy and people moving,’’ MVC Chief Administrator Sue Fulton said. “Extending the expiration dates for CDLs and CLPs in New Jersey will keep our truckers and bus drivers on the road, where they belong, while at the same time reducing the need for visits to MVC Licensing Centers.’’

Customers are advised that CDLs, CLPs, and medical certifications that expired prior to March 1, 2020 are not extended. Medical certifications issued for less than 90 days are not extended, either.

The MVC also has waived the requirement for CLP holders to wait 14 days to take the CDL skills test. The waiver is in effect until December 31, 2020.

The extensions announced by the MVC follow a recent waiver from the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA), which granted similar extensions to drivers with expired CDLs, CLPs, and medical certifications.

The MVC previously announced expiration date extensions for CDLs and CLPs in March and June, as part of its ongoing response to the COVID-19 public health emergency.
