Vermont Courts to Begin Expanding Operations on June 1st

On Monday, June 1st, courts will begin a gradual expansion of operations to include the hearing of non-emergency matters. The expansion of operations across units and divisions will occur at different rates. This is due to a variety of factors, including the time and other resources needed to outfit and arrange courthouses and courtrooms in a way that promotes social distancing and is consistent with other applicable public health guidelines.

Going forward, many hearings will be held remotely via video or telephone. If you are scheduled for a remote hearing and have questions, please call your local court for information. If you are scheduled to attend a hearing in person, be sure to arrive at the court at least 15 minutes early to allow time for screening at the front door. Please be aware that pursuant to the Supreme Court's Declaration of a Judicial Emergency, social distancing restrictions are in place and all visitors must wear face coverings.
