Socioeconomic Origin and Attitudes About Mentoring

Cnt In this survey, you will be asked a series of questions about your attitudes, experiences, and demographics. The benefits you may expect from participating are as follows: compensation of 50 cents (for a 15-minute survey); an opportunity to win a $100 raffle an opportunity to contribute to scientific research The principal investigator does not foresee any risks regarding your involvement in this survey. By giving your consent to participate in this research, you will participate in a study in which you will answer a series of questions. The study should take 15 minutes to complete. Your participation is entirely voluntary; you may choose not to participate or may withdraw from this study at any time without penalty. The information you provide about yourself will be completely anonymous and confidential. Only the principal investigator will be able to view your responses, and your responses will not be associated with your name or any other identifying information. Only averages and general trends among variables will be shown in publications. If you have any questions or concerns, you can address them to the researcher: Amber Holden, PhD student at the Rotman School of Management (amber.holden15@rotman.utoronto.ca). If you have questions about your rights as a research participant, please contact the Office of Research Ethics at the University of Toronto at ethics.review@utoronto.ca or 416-946-3273. If the preceding information is clear to you, please indicate that you understand your rights as a participant and give your consent to participate in this survey. You must check 1 box below to continue on to the next page.

AT1 Most modern theories of decision making recognize the fact that decisions do not take place in a vacuum. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions; if not, then some of our questions will be unclear. So, in order to demonstrate that you have read the instructions, please do not answer any of the questions on this page. Instead, just hit the next button on the bottom right of the page. This will advance you to the actual study. You will begin answering questions again on the following page.

Q43 We will now ask some questions about your experiences. We are interested in your honest opinion and ratings.

RS Please answer the following items with respect to your socioeconomic status (i.e., social class background). Please imagine yourself in each situation and select the number that best indicates how you feel.

RS1 Imagine you are at work in early January talking about what you did for the holidays. You realize that several of the coworkers around you come from a very different socioeconomic background than you do.

	Very unconcerned (1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	Very concerned (6)
How concerned/anxious would you be that the coworkers might reject you after learning about your socioeconomic status? (1)	❍	❍	❍	❍	❍	❍

RS1B

	Very unlikely (1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	Very likely (6)
The coworkers would accept me after learning about my socioeconomic status. (1)	❍	❍	❍	❍	❍	❍

RS2 Imagine that you are at Human Resources to complete a survey about employee backgrounds. As part of the survey, you are asked for an estimate of your parents' income. One of your coworker acquaintances is at the Human Resources office and offers to hand your form in with his. If you give him your form he will clearly be able to see your parents' income.

End Thank you for your time and participation! A little information about this study: Research has shown that employees from lower socioeconomic origins are less likely to have a mentor at work than their coworkers from higher socioeconomic origins (Dreher & Ash, 1990). We are trying to understand why this is happening because workplace relationships of this type are important for both employee well-being and organizational outcomes (Chao, 1997; Payne & Huffman, 2005). Please contact the researcher (amber.holden15@rotman.utoronto.ca) for additional information or findings of this survey (once they are available).
