[1] When calculating points, the correctness of the semantic role assessment of the subject is considered if appropriate (agent, experiencer, patient, theme, instrument, purpose, manner etc.). The presence of insignificant inaccuracies is estimated at half a point, with significant errors or omission of the subject – zero.
[2] The evaluation of the actualizer is carried out in the same way as the evaluation of the subject.
[3] In this case, the mentioning of the century characterizes the properties of the subject (old, historical, from a past culture, etc.), and does not reflect its current localization.
[4] Hereinafter, in any anaphora case, the corresponding antecedent is taken into account only once when calculating points.
[5] Here localization takes place in the expected future.
[6] I.e., recently (time localization).

[7] The possessive pronoun serves as a specifier indicating the characteristics of the subject's belonging to the organization.
[8] The actualizer is implied one here, i.e., it is the unclarified situation that preceded ‘our’ arrival in the studio.
[9] In this case, the subject does not coincide with the actualizer, as it might seem at first glance. Here the subject is the “conscious self”, which reflects on ignorance of number of obstacles. That is, “ignorant self” is the actualizer.

[10] Despite the obvious temporal semantics of the word ‘morning’, here it is categorized as a specifier since it refers to the word ‘coffee’ and rather answers the question "what kind of coffee?" than render time localization of the particular coffee drinking.
[11] Here, unlike other cases, the subject is not just omitted, it is ambiguous one. It is unclear for whom exactly the ‘unfortune” – for Imogen or Eytif? Participants` awareness of this ambiguity was considered and scored by us during the assessment of the completeness of this fragment comprehension.
[12] The absence or lack of something we consider as a specification as well.
[13] Localization of what is happening here and now.
[14] The actualizer here is a purported reason why ‘it’ (Geneva) was chosen to host the summit. The reason is revealed in the next LCU.
[15] We considered the semantic differences between 'very quickly ' and "at a short notice' as insignificant against the backdrop of the obvious strong synonymous relationship. For these reasons, we decided not to divide this LCU into two separate ones. However, when assessing the comprehension of the corresponding fragment, we took into account the completeness of these synonyms representation by the study participants.
[16] Direct time localization.
