Assessment of agriculture and food security policy processes in Nigeria: Stakeholder Survey, 2018

Consent Statement

This research survey is part of the Feed the Future Nigeria Agricultural Policy Project to study the institutional architecture and quality of policy processes on agriculture and food security in Nigeria. This project is jointly managed by the International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI) and Michigan State University (MSU) with funding from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID)'s Nigeria Mission. Similar research surveys are being conducted by the FSP project in other countries in Africa and Asia to derive "best practice" lessons on strengthening policy processes on agriculture and food security issues. Survey respondents will be contacted again in two years to obtain from them an updated assessment on the topics covered in this survey in order to better understand any changes in the institutional architecture or in the quality of policy processes on agriculture and food security in Nigeria. You are free to voluntarily choose to participate in this research survey, refuse to answer certain questions, or stop participating at any time without any loss or harm to you. If you choose to participate, your help in answering these questions is greatly appreciated. Your responses will be kept completely confidential to the maximum extent allowable by law. Your responses will be summed together with those from other stakeholders in Nigeria and possibly from other countries. Only general averages from the analysis will be reported. For any questions about the study, contact Mr. SL, Assistant Professor, Michigan State University <phone number deleted>. By continuing with this survey, you indicate your voluntary consent to participate in this study.
