The 2018 Cooperative Congressional Election Study was supported by the National Science Foundation Award # 1756447.

Introduction

The Cooperative Congressional Election Study, or CCES, seeks to study how Americans view Congress and hold their representatives accountable during elections, how they voted and their electoral experiences, and how their behavior and experiences vary with political geography and social context.

This is a guide to the 2018 CCES Competitive Districts Survey. This survey is a supplement to the 2018 CCES and was designed to focus on vote choices in competitive US House races. This dataset includes interviews with 17,000 American adults, 13,000 of whom were living in House districts that were classified as competitive or potentially competitive during the 2018 campaign, and the remaining living in non-competitive districts. We identified 52 House districts as "competitive" for the purpose of this study, and we interviewed an average of 250 respondents in each district. These districts are identified and described below. The remaining 4,000 cases were evenly distributed among the remaining 383 uncompetitive congressional districts.

This guide describes the methodology behind the competitive districts study and the measures and variables included for the study. There are five parts to the 2018 CCES competitive districts survey – sample identifiers (including state and congressional district), profile questions (largely demographic), pre-election questions (both the CCES common content as well as a special questionnaire for this study), post-election questions, and contextual data (including candidate names and parties, election results, and roll call votes). This codebook provides question wordings, values, and frequencies presented of the variables for the 2018 competitive districts dataset.

Study Design

The goal of this study was to create a dataset that provided sufficient power to understand vote choices and opinions among citizens in competitive House races. We used classifications from the Cook Political Report in June 2018 to identify the districts that we would oversample during the cycle. We included all districts that met one of two criteria – (1) the district had a Partisan Voter Index (PVI) between +2 and -2 (37 districts met this criteria) or (2) the district was rated as a "toss up" by the Cook Political Report in June, 2018 (15 additional districts met this criteria). This created three groups of "competitive" districts:

1. 25 districts that had a PVI between -2 and 2 but were not rated as "toss up" races by the Cook Political Report in June 2018
2. 12 districts that had a PVI between -2 and 2 and were rated as "toss up" races in June 2018
3. 15 districts that did not have a PVI between -2 and 2 but were rated as "toss up" races in June 2018

We interviewed an average of 200 respondents per district from group 1 and 300 per district from groups 2 and 3 for a total of 13,000 interviews in the competitive districts. The remaining 4,000 interviews were split evenly between safe Democratic districts and safe Republican districts. Overall, then, there are five strata:

Strata	Number of districts	Sample size
PVI $\pm$ 2, not rated as "toss up"	25	5,404
PVI $\pm$ 2, rated as "toss up"	12	3,338
PVI $>$ |2|, rated as "toss up"	15	4,258
Safe/Likely Democratic	169	2,000
Safe/Likely Republican	214	2,000

Sample subsets and questionnaire administration

This competitive districts dataset is constructed using two different types of respondents:

1. Sample A: 5,000 respondents who are a fresh sample and were administered the CCES common content questionnaire plus the competitive districts study questionnaire.
2. Sample B: 12,000 respondents from the common content dataset who received a shortened version of the competitive districts pre-election questionnaire and the full competitive districts post-election questionnaire.

Thus, 12,000 respondents in the competitive districts dataset can also be found in the common content dataset for 2018. However, 5,000 respondents in this dataset are not part of the sample for the 2018 common content dataset.

All respondents received the full 2018 CCES Common Content questionnaire. Respondents who were already part of the common content dataset (Sample B) received a short version of the competitive districts pre-election wave questionnaire; this short version is about half the length of the full questionnaire administered to the 5,000 respondents in sample A who comprised the fresh sample for this study. Respondents who received the short version of the questionnaire did not answer items `CD18_320a` - `CD18_344`. The dataset includes weights that can be used when analyzing questions asked of all 17,000 respondents (e.g. `weight_longshort`) and a different set of weights when analyzing questions asked only of the fresh sample (e.g. `weight_long`).

	Sample A	Sample B
Source	Fresh sample	2018 common content
Sample size	5,000	12,000
Common Content questionnaire asked?	Yes	Yes
Competitive Districts pre-election items asked	Half (`CD_300H` - `CD18_315_4`)	All items
Competitive Districts post-election items asked	All items	All items

Sampling Frame, Matching, and Weighing for Competitive Districts

To create a frame with information on congressional districts, YouGov took the following steps, starting with the 2016 American Community Survey as the base:

1. Impute congressional district conditional on PUMA (Public Use Microdata Areas) and demographics
2. Rake to American Community Survey (ACS) demographics and observed state level turnout
3. Impute registration and turnout conditional on demographics and state
4. Rake to demographics and turnout by state for 18+ citizens
5. Rake 2016 exit poll to ACS demographics and actual vote by state
6. Impute 2016 vote conditional on demographics by region
7. Rake to demographics and 2016 vote by state for voters
8. Rake to demographics and 2016 vote by congressional district for voters
9. Increment age by 2, apply survival weights
10. Impute education for 18-21 year olds
11. Impute registration for 18-21 year olds from Current Population Survey (CPS) 2016
12. Rake to 2016 census population projections for demographics

The resultant data was then aggregated by competitive district type (the strata described above):

1. Swing PVI, not rated as competitive in 2018
2. Swing PVI, rated as competitive in 2018
3. Not Swing PVI, rated as competitive in 2018
4. Rated as Safe/Likely Dem in 2018
5. Rated as Safe/Likely Rep in 2018

The fresh sample drawn for the long-form Competitive CD study were chosen from the YouGov Panel, along with the P4Sample and Lucid panels using a six-way cross-classification (age x gender x race x education x region x sample source). Additionally, a subset of respondents from the CCES common content were administered a short form of the questionnaire. For the long form cases and the long and short formed combined cases, the final set of completed pre-election interviews for each congressional district category was then matched to the target frame, using a weighted Euclidean distance metric conditioning on region x age x race x gender x education.

Weighting

The samples were weighted to adjust for any remaining imbalance that exists among the matched sample. The matched cases and the frame described above were combined and the combined cases were weighted using propensity score weighing to match the distributions of the frame on gender, age, race, education level, and region. Weights larger than 7 were trimmed and the final weights normalized to equal sample size.

Using Weights

The supplied weights do not make the sample nationally representative, though we hope to provide weights for this purpose in future releases. Rather, the weights can be used to generate representative samples by each strata. Specifically, subsetting the data to respondents in strata 1 (using variable `OScode`) and then using the weights will provide a representative sample of individuals living in the 15 districts with a PVI $\pm$ 2, but not rated as "toss up" districts. Likewise, subsetting to Strata 5 will provide a representative sample of adults living in safe Republican districts. The weights are not designed to make samples representative at the congressional district level.

The dataset includes four weighting variables – weights that make the data representative (1) of the adult population or (2) of the registered voter population for both the fresh sample only (5,000 respondents who answered the full competitive districts questionnaire) and the full 17,000 respondents, 12,000 of whom answered only a short version of the competitive districts questionnaire. The weights are constructed to ensure that the sample is representative of different populations – either adults or adults who are registered to vote.

Variable name	Respondent group	Target population
`weight_long`	Fresh sample only (n=5,000)	Adults
`weight_longshort`	Fresh sample & common content respondents (n=17,000)	Adults
`weight_long_vv`	Fresh sample only & matched to registration record	Registered adults
`weight_longshort_vv`	Full sample & matched to registration record	Registered adults

We recommend the use of `weight_long` or `weight_longshort` any time researchers wish to characterize the opinions and behaviors of adults in each strata. We recommend the use of `weight_long_vv` or `weight_longshort_vv` any time researchers wish to characterize the opinions, behaviors, or traits of voters or registered voters. The"vv" stands for "voter validated" and these weights are missing for all respondents who were not validated as (active) registered voters.

If seeking to characterize the opinions, behaviors, or traits of voters, use `weight_long_vv` or `weight_longshort_vv` in conjunction with the vote validation variables.

Questionnaire

A tabulation of responses for each of the variables in the dataset are provided here. Each table includes the variable code (as it appears in the dataset) and its label attribute on the first line, as well as the associated question wording for each asked question in the subsequent line.

Contextual variables, i.e. variables that are not survey questions and were either added as text to fill in questions or added later, are tabulated in Part IV.

All counts are unweighted, raw counts. Observations with missing values (not shown in the counts) are either due to respondent skipping and missing due to the question not being asked to the respondent (e.g. due to branching).

Please consult the questionnaire on Dataverse and the list of frequently asked questions on our website to examine more information, like (a) the branching structure of the questions asked, (b) the order in which the questions were asked (the order in this guide is not necessarily the order in which questions were asked), (c) the grid structure of the questions (this guide disaggregates grid questions into rows).
