Study Title: Perspectives on Media and Politics
Principal Investigator: Kaylyn Jackson Schiff, Emory Department of Political Science
Funding Source: Emory University and Georgia Institute of Technology

Introduction and Study Overview
Thank you for your interest in our research study on media and politics. We would like to tell you everything you need to think about before you decide whether or not to join the study. It is entirely your choice. If you decide to take part, you can change your mind later on and withdraw from the research study.

The purpose of this study is to learn about popular perspectives on media and politics. The study is funded by Emory University and Georgia Institute of Technology. This study will take about 3-5 minutes to complete.

If you join, you will be asked to read a story or watch a short video of a real event involving a politician, provide your reactions, and then answer a few demographic questions about yourself. As this study is an experiment, participants will view different versions of the politician statements and stories or videos. Some information may be withheld to avoid biasing the results of the study. At the end, additional information about the purpose and goals of the study will be provided.

The risks due to participation in this study are that you may find some of the information presented to be offensive.

The benefits of participation are that you can share your opinions on media and politics, and you may also gain media literacy skills.

Study records can be opened by court order. They also may be provided in response to a subpoena or a request for the production of documents. Certain offices and people other than the researchers may look at study records. Government agencies and Emory employees overseeing proper study conduct may look at your study records. These offices include the Office for Human Research Protections, the Emory Institutional Review Board, and the Emory Office of Research Compliance. Study funders may also look at your study records. Emory will keep any research records we create private to the extent we are required to do so by law. A study number rather than your name will be used on study records wherever possible. Your name and other facts that might point to you will not appear when we present this study or publish its results.

We will disclose your information when required to do so by law in the case of reporting child abuse or elder abuse, in addition to subpoenas or court orders.

Pre-Treatment

Before we proceed, we have a question about how you're feeling.

Recent research on decision making shows that choices are affected by context. Differences in how people feel, their previous knowledge and experiment, and their environment can affect choices. To help us understand how people make decisions, we are interested in information about you. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions: if not, some results may not tell us very much about decision making in the real world. To show that you have read the instructions, please ignore the question about how you are feeling and instead check only the “none of the above” option as your answer. Thank you very much.

Please check all words that describe how you are currently feeling.

Debrief

Thank you for taking this survey.

The information provided to you about the politician is part of a study on "fake news" and the impacts that it has on trust in politics and the media. While the story presented to you about the politician is real, the reply by the politician was created by a team of researchers and therefore does not represent an actual statement made by the politician.
