Hello
user1

Hi
user2

I'm not sure, to be honest. You?
user2

I think both sides can be hypocritical, but lately the issue of abortion has really been bothering me, in regards to Republicans.
user1

Yeah, me too, with your first part of your message. That's why I said ''I'm not sure.'' I also think that both sides can be hypocritical
user2

I feel like they're very high and mighty about protecting the unborn, but entirely disinterested in protecting children, be it with school shootings, or programs that support families with small children.
user1

''but lately the issue of abortion has really been bothering me, in regards to Republicans.''
user2

Agreed
user2

Yeah me too
user2

As a mom, myself, I had a child in 2015 and at the time I was firmly middle class, but after I had my son I faced a host of issues with employment and I found it really difficult to maintain my financial position. I really worry for women who have to have children they aren't financially prepared for.
user1

I wish that our government provided better safety nets for kids that are already here instead of focusing on abortion.
user1

as far as democrats go, I think their biggest hypocrisy lies in free speech.
user1

I honestly think it should be the mother's choice as to what she wants to do with the child. I'm pro-choice but am respectful of everyone's opinions, even if I don't agree. And yeah, I see where you're coming from and would think the same, if I was you. I've never been a mom but can see where you're coming from
user2

''as far as democrats go, I think their biggest hypocrisy lies in free speech.'' Explain?
user2

I feel like it's becoming increasingly difficult to discuss controversial topics without other members of the party trying to censure you. I'm half black, and it's kind of appalling how quick people jump to labeling someone as a racist when they just need to be educated a bit.
user1

I'm not black at all but totally agree with you
user2

I think it's important that we all be more open-minded and willing to give others the benefit of the doubt when discussing things like race and lgbtq rights
user1