It' hard to say. Too much progressive feels hypocritical, but Republican is also hypocritical...
user1

Republicans, for sure, though I do think Democrats can take their fair share of hypocritical stances, I feel the entire modern Republican party is constructed upon a platform of hypocritical thinking
user2

Agree.
user1

I think, and feel free to disagree, so much of the GOP today is US vs THE OTHER
user2

be the other immigrants, or liberals, or gays
user2

so they build out rules for them, the other, that they want them to follow
user2

but they do the opposite
user2

I mean, thats the definition of hypocrisy right?
user2

Yup
user1

Most of Republican politicians are too much right.
user1

They make rule for their convenience, not for citizen.
user1

Agree, and they force the Democrats to come to the center or to the center right just to get anything done
user2

There are some reasonable Republican, but too few.
user1

I guess that would be an example of Democratic hypocrisy, they run on Progress, but the best we usually end up with is just the status quo
user2

Yeah, you mention for convenience, they will use anything and anyone when they are convenient.
user2

Take majority is the key to make rules
user1

They bring out Veterans and worship the troops, but when they get home, they do next to nothing to help them
user2

exactly!
user1

So hypocritic.
user1

Or the deficit, they will run up the deficit while cutting taxes for the rich when they have power, but then stifle any attempt to pass bills or help normal Americans because it cost too much
user2

Small Government, freedom, taxes, abortion, it goes on and on
user2

they say one thing but do another
user2

Well it was good chatting with you
user2

keep fighting the good fight
user2

Ahhh, yes yes, and yes. I wish there is more reasonable politicians who has basic moral.
user1