Obviously Republicans. They stand in the way of everything Democrats want to do, 100 percent of GOP Senators vote against every Democrat bill, then they turn around and say it's all because Democrats won't work with them. And this has been happening for years now.
user1

It's definitely that republicans are drastically more hypocritical. The amount of hullabaloo over things like "now isn't the time for politics" when they are politicans or the amount of R's who insist than LGBTQ+ folks are groomers while ignoring R's like Matt Gaetz is obscene.
user2

Even voting for judges and SCOTUS justices, they won't even schedule a hearing for an Obama nominee yet they will ram a GOP nominee right through
user1

Yeah, and how people can claim not to see it is ridiculous
user1

I think it was Sen Graham who even said you can call me out in 4 years if I'm hypocritical
user2

The GOP is the party of hate
user1

Completely agreed
user2

and I can't stand any of them
user1

I'm just hoping we don't lose any seats in the midterms
user1

I don't understand how Republicans can be so far removed from reality with some of the things they believe
user2

I honestly think they don't believe any of it, they just don't want to lose power
user1

I agree that the politicans know they're full of BS - it's the voters who believe the propaganda that scare me
user2

the politician know their supporters are not very bright and are full of hate for Democrats and women and gays and pro-choice
user1

hopefully we can get through the midterms and the economy will start to turn around
user1