Well that's quite the prompt
user1

You ain't kidding.
user2

In reality, they're both sides of the same coin. They're both equally as hypocritical.
user2

I feel like Republicans I guess, but man are the Democrats not without hypocrisy
user1

Exactly. Of course I think Republicans are worse, but to say that the Democrats are w/out hypocrisy is absolutely insane.
user2

Yea, feeling very disillusioned with US politics. Don't know what generation you hail from, but I'm really sick of how they do not seem to reflect what people want
user1

Just take COVID. How many of those who are screaming about "my body my rights" were the first ones to take the vaccines?
user2

Yea, both sides did some impressive mental gymnastics to appeal to their base
user1

I'm a Generation X'er. I see nothing about BOTH parties wanting what is best for themselves, not for what best represents their people.
user2

er, you know what i mean.
user2

Millennial here, I understand
user1

All they care about is themselves, not about their base.
user2

"Do what I say, not what I do."
user2

Seems like I just get to against whomever is worse, instead of who I want
user1

Agreed 100%. It's always about the worse of the two evils.
user2

Like I would really like to see ranked choice voting, I think our election system totally keeps these geriatrics in power with the first past the goal mentality
user1

I live in a VERY blue state, and we voted against it in the last election cycle
user1