Maybe this is just a kneejerk reaction, but Iâ€™d say Republicans are more hypocritical
user1

They always seem to be the ones wrapped up in scandals
user1

Personally, I find that both Democrats and Republicans are hypocritical, especially politicians.
user2

Oh for sure, Democrats definitely arenâ€™t immune to hypocrisy
user1

But Republicans definitely sweep it under the rug better.
user2

Otherwise, how have they lasted this long as a values-based party, you know?
user2

I just see a lot of Republicans who rail against people who arenâ€™t patriotic enough, but turn around and support the actions of January 6
user1

Honestly I think a lot of Republican voters just donâ€™t care
user1

Yes, and just look at what happened in the past week with the NRA and the Uvalde shooting.
user2

Exactly, so long as their key issues are supported conservatives see no issues
user1

I think a lot of Americans in general do not have faith in the political process. The Republican voters don't care to a certain extent, but they care enough to vote for their own party.
user2

Which I can't say the same about Democrats and independents
user2

Hey, I hardly have faith in the process myself at this point
user1

Itâ€™s easy to just give up completely than to stick to my positions and just vote blue anyway
user1

Weâ€™ll have to see if anything changes as things keep getting more unequal
user1

Yes, same. Republicans are good with making the political process work for them, which is ironic considering the reason for the whole Jan. 6 riot you mentioned
user2

Say what you will but Republicans do get things done effectively
user1

Whereas Democrats canâ€™t seem to hang together even as the party in control
user1

Itâ€™s very focused on the issues, rather than putting people on pedestals
user1

You might not like ted cruz but youâ€™ll still vote for him
user1

Yes, I completely agree with you. What big plans have Democrats been able to pass so far? Nothing, really. Honestly, we need bipartisan action, but the two parties are so far apart these days
user2

I wish more Republicans were willing to cross the aisle - no party can do this alone
user1

Exactly. I have some hope for gun control after what happened in Texas. At the very least, an age limit, which some Republicans seem to support
user2

It feels like certain politicians donâ€™t care and arenâ€™t even hiding it anymore
user1