That is a tricky question, I hate to say it, but I fear that it is the Democrats. Republicans are very open about what they are and what they want. Democrats often talk a big, progressive game, but when the time comes to do something, they bow to the pressure of financial interests.

I think that Democrats and Republicans can both be very hypocritical, however I feel that Democrats are quicker to call it out when it's within their own party.

I do actually agree with that! I have to say that R's are very straight forward about what they want and who they are. I think D's are willing to cave a lot of times.
