Republicans are by far more hypocritical. They will say whtever they want their people to ehar when it comes to issues such as abortion rights, immigration, and gun control.
user1

I mean, personally, I think Republicans as a whole are generally more hypocritical. They often like to insult others who are different from themselves but can't handle anything negative said about them
user2

That is very true. It goes along with social issues. Their are several Republican politicians who are pro-life, yet who have had affairs and had their mistresses have abortions.
user1

I agree with you there, JM. They do often say whatever they think will help them out in their current situation but then their actions don't always match their words at all.
user2

The common phrase these days is that Republicans are all about loving fetuses until they are born.
user1

Then there is no compassion. Against any kind of government benefits to actually help the child.
user1

Haha, yeah I've heard that before and have to say I agree that's true. They want to force people to have children but God forbid if anyone should actually want those children to be cared for in any way.
user2

Also with the movement to put guns in schools..they want teachers to be armed, yet certain wings of the GOP are also calling teachers "groomers" and doing everything they can to not properly pay teachers.
user1