I think republicans are more hypocritical
user1

I think they are both hypocritical, but Republicans probably a little more. I think a lot of them try to quote the Bible and use religious beliefs as an excuse, but the majority of the time they are not actually living how Jesus lived. Jesus loved everybody.
user2

Also they talk about their rights and freedoms, but they they don't allow others to have their own rights and freedoms.
user2

Why do you think they are more hypocritical?
user2

I agree with your exacts positions as to why they are hypocritical.
user1

We also see the whole pro life movement, but they are more so pro-birth
user1

ANd they use religion as the point
user1

Yes, I agree. I don't think it's fair they care about babies that are not even babies yet and are not born yet, when they don't care about people who are already born
user2

I don't understand how they can be so concerned with what everyone else is doing. If you don't agree with it, just don't do it. Their beliefs do not dictate everyone else rights.
user1

I agree. Let other people live as long as they are not doing anything that affects you or others. They try to control other people too much, but then they get mad if someone tries to control things like background checks for guns
user2

They care enough to have the baby born but they want to cut every program intended to help these babies. I don't think it is our position to judge whether or not someone actually needs help. Of course, there are people that abuse the system, there always will be but you see that on both sides of the aisle and it is rare. If one person slips by, so what... there are several that need help
user1

Yes exactly. Why would I tell a woman what to do with her body? It's HERS. Also, yeah again, Jesus helped everybody without judging. But lots of republicans love quoting the Bible when it benefits them but they miss the big picture.
user2