I think Republicans are more hypocritical because they say one thing and do another. Example: Mitch McConnell saying that Obama could not select and Supreme Court Justice in his last year in office, but then pushing through Amy Coney Barrett in the last few months of Donald Trump's term.
user1

That would be a standing ovation for the democrats. No contest. I'm a Conservative, not necessarily Republican but definitely right wing, and sure enough you can find hypocrisy there as well. But anyone not voting democrats on this is either blind or hopelessly biased.
user2

I agree. I have voted for more Republicans than Democrats over time, but I doubt that I will ever vote for another Republican after the mess the current members have made of their party. Members of Congress stood up and decried the January 6 insurrection directly afterwards. Then they changed their minds and said those people were just on normal tours. They investigated the 25th Amendment behind the scenes, but they are now saying they would support Trump in 2024.
user1

Overall, I would say that the Republican's are more hypocritical but you're going to have a hard time finding any genuinely straight-edge "good guys" a
user2

I agree. There is plenty of hypocrisy to go around. In the meantime, nothing is getting done by Congress. If I did my job like they do theirs, I would have been fired the first week!
user1

I remember Kevin McCarthy saying Trump was to blame for January 6. Then he went to Mar-a-Lago and came back to deny everything that he said, even though it was on tape. Unbelievable!
user1