I think Democrats, due to the fact that we Democrats always discuss who we want to help others but we never apply it into our surroundings.

We buy overpriced Starbucks coffee instead of buying locally, or we don't donate to charity that often compared to Republicans or independents.

Republicans are more hypocritical because they are pretty much always willing to do whatever they can to get what they want. Democrats are more often afraid to make moves for the fear of backlash or seeming hypocritical.

I disagree, at least the Republicans never try to hide their true motives and act as they would say.

I would say never is a strong word, but I would agree that Democrats tend to hide their motivations more often.

Meanwhile Democrats are hypocrite's when it comes to helping other in a personal matter and think the government should do everything. Instead of having civil society or donating to charity to help others.
