Well, I've never really thought much about it. When I watch Democrats speak about different subjects, they look natural, seem sincere and appear to speak from their heart.

I believe that Republicans are more hypocritical. This morning on a political show a Republican mentioned how what is said in private is way off from what is said in public. The reference was to matters around Donald Trump. Many Republicans believe he is not. fit for office. They would never admit it.

Republicans say things only to appeal to their base. They persist in the "big lie". They do not support The January 6 commissioon. Although immediatley after the attack they were very critical. It was funny how therir tunes changed over time.
user2

Republican can also "appear" natural and sincere. They are good actors.
user2

When I watch republicans during an interview or news conference, they seem to mention "it's what is best for the American People. That is not true. Republicans only want what will appease their rich friends and line their pockets.the American people" or what the American people

Yes they are very good actors. They are also Trump followers and I don't understand that at all.
user1

Yes. They want to line their pockets. That is why heavy support for the NRA. Come On! No civilian should be able to buy military grade weapons.
user2

Yes! Most Americans including myself feel that way. In fact I believe there are bills stalling in Congress now to make changes to background checks. Republics don't want to touch it.

I do not understand his power over them They are so deluded! I am reading Mark Esper's book right now. He served for Trump, all the while admitting that the man is not fit for service. A little for that.
user2

Americans need to believe in a cause and not a person. Republicans and Democrats need to work together. I believe Democrats make more of an effort to collaborate.
user2

I need to read that book! I saw an interview with him talking about Trumps behavior.
