I think both sides are very hypocritical, it just depends on the issue
user1

I think republicans are way more hypocritical. They freak out when you ask them to wear a mask or get a vaccine, but then they want to do things like prevent women from getting abortions and force them to be pregnant.
user2

the loyalty of politicians is to their donors, not their constituents, so they'll say what they need to say to get elected and then behave differently based on where their money is coming from
user1

I would agree with that. It's frustrating how little politicians seem to care about actually enacting change,
user2

democrats are also hypocritical because they talk about supporting people but then don't actually fund the things that will help
user1

it doesn't feel like politicians on either side care about being honest tbh
user1

True. I think democrats truly believe in the things they stand for, but don't have enough spine or backbone to do much about changing anything
user2

Republicans just seem to believe in state authority and control above all, even though they claim to want "small government"
user2

yes, I agree Republicans are all for free speech except when it comes to talking about how racism built this country into what it is today
user1

Completely agree!! Systemic racism is so real. But god forbid anyone talk about it or say the word "gay" in school. They don't want THAT kind of free speech for some reason.
user2

right :/
user1

also the idea of protecting fetuses, but not children in school
user1

Yes. It's sick to me. They refuse to say anything negative about guns and act like there's nothing we can do.
user2

right - the classic onion article about it being "out of our hands" is so depressing
user1

Democrats can be hypocritical when it comes to helping the homeless and things like that though. They love the idea of multi-family housing but they never want it in their neighborhoods
user2

right - they live in gated communities surrounded by white people but then talk about the importance of diversity
user1

A lot of democrats are too comfortable to actually want to change anything.
user2

yeah and there's no incentive for them to change because no democrat would vote for a republican, but they still want to vote
user1

it's like we're picking the better of two evils where we should have some decent options
user1

Agreed, 2 parties aren't enough for a whole country
user2