I guess it depends on which political party you belong to. But from my point of view, I think Republicans are much more hypocritical. You?
user1

With Republicans I don't think in those terms... i think they are just plain wrong.
user2

Yeah, I would agree with that as well.
user1

Here's why I think they're hypocritical (and wrong)...
user1

They say they are pro-life, but these are the people that are most in support of the death penalty, and gun rights. We've seen in Texas what loose gun laws will get you.
user1

Also, they argue that banning guns won't do anything to stop gun violence, but are so quick to ban things they don't agree with (such as abortions)
user1

I worry about a lot of issues--lately about gun control. I agree with your stance
user2

What do you think is the answer to the gun issue in America?
user1

More controls on how many guns you can have and what kind, There is no reason in the world that an 18 yr old should have an AK-47
user2

For me, I am personally in favor of repealing the second amendment. But since that isn't politically feasible, I think we start painting Republicans as the party in favor or child slaughter and guns in schools. If that can drive enough people towards democrats, then we pack courts and pass laws for stricter gun control. I think if the opposite was the case, Republicans wouldn't hesitate to paint Democrats as the party of being in favor of your children getting killed in schools.
user1

In fairness, no one can have an AK-47. Those are still illegal
user1

We have to look at the availibity of guns -too often they end up in the wrong hands
user2

That's what Democrats can do if they gain a greater majority, they can pass universal background checks and the things that most Americans want. We have to do a better job at painting Republicans as the ones in favor of massacres.
user1

Because with their inaction, they essentially are
user1

i believe that is true.
user2

Are you a real person?
user1

You bet. Are you?
user2