This is a difficult topic in my opinion because I think that they are both very hypocritical.

I think the Republicans are WAY more hypocritical. For example, they are pro-life when it comes to abortion but won't do a damned thing to stop actual children from being killed in their schools

I agree. I also know plenty of Democrats who will harp about the government taking care of homeless yet will walk right past a homeless person on the street without thinking about helping them.

Likewise, once a child is born, Republicans stop caring about them too. They don't want that child to have food, shelter, health care...but will force a woman to carry the child to term

I think that not being hypocritical starts with each one of us. We can not place blame or expect someone else to take care of an issue if we are not willing to do even a small part. If you want a woman to have a baby, then as a society we need to help her care for that child if she can't.

They don't want immigrants to work here and steal jobs from Americans, but they don't want to pay Americans a living wage.

I do agree with that point though there has to be a middle ground as immigration is such a pressing problem for this country.
user1

I don't see it as a problem. We are a nation of immigrants
user2

We certainly are but we need programs in place to make sure everyone is taken care of. We can't have such a huge homeless problem and keep taking in people who may or may not be able to support themselves.
