I think the Republicans are by far the most hypocritical. They are elected to serve and d nothing. They block every piece of legislation that will benefit mid to lower income Americans while refusing to compromise.
user1

So, from my perspective as a Democrat, and watching the current debates about guns and abortion rights, i'd have to say Republicans are m uch more hypocritical. You can't generate more cognitive dissonance than "I'm pro-life" and at the same time "Guns should not be regulated." There is no reasonable way to justify both positions.
user2

Exactly! They claim to care about the unborn but once they are born so no concern for children being killed by unstable people being able to get guns as well as other programs for low-income children.
user1

When pressed, Republicans generate homilies and thoughts and prayers, while continuing to work for their masters - gun manufacturers, and increasingly, the Christo-fascist authoritarian lobby.
user2

their pockets are lined by NRA donations and that matters more to them than anything else. No Democrat is against the 2nd amendment. There is a right to bear arms but within reason. No one needs military type weapons. That is not what the forefathers had in mind when the amendment was written. We simply want better controls such as background checks, age limitations, etc.
user1

I am convinced that Repoublicans mean to end any semblance of representative democracy, and institute authortarain governement, to prop up their declining whaite base.
user2

white
user2

I have to agree with you there. The Jan. 6th riots presented a clear example of such.
user1

Gun fetish is only part of the white nationalist cult of racist violence.
user2

They hide behind religion.
user1