That's an interesting topic. I think democrats and republicans can be similarly hypocritical. What do you think?

I think both democrats and republicans will say one thing, but then when they have competing goals, not even "against" one another, but conflicting issues, even what is said to be important or a priority can fall by the wayside.

I was about to say the same. Take the war between Russia and Ukraine. The reason some democrats give for why Russia attacked are some of the same reasons the USA has used against other countries even under democratic leadership. Similarly you have republicans who've praised Putin recently now changing their tune.

For example, the campaign promises to make college tuition free and lower student loan payments. These promises have not been met and will not be met.
