i think that republicans are more hypocritical than democrats from all that ive seen democrats are more likely to uphold the policies that they say they will.

The president recently said he would reanalyze gun control and is implementing a plan to limit and regulate the sale of ghost guns after that terrible shooting in texas.

A lot of Republican policies are based on hypocrisy or selective memory. For example: claiming the right to make your own medical decisions with regard to vaccines and masking during a pandemic while trying to ban abortions nationwide.

They also claim to be "the party of small government" while consistently calling for restrictions and interference with private businesses when it suits thir needs.

I Agree none actually follow through with policy changes they simply parrot what is currently popular in the media among people.

I feel like since biden has become president our country is slowly beginning to heal itself and get back some kind of normal.

They have an entire network that parrots talking points that constantly contradict each other, with no sense of self-awareness.

Biden inherited a very bad situation. I'm not a huge fan - he's far too moderate and places too much of a priority on "bipartisanship" with a party that openly calls him an extremists and admits they will always block any attempts to legislate.

I know when the media show old clips of trump making speeches i am just amazed at some of the thing that came out of his mouth and that their were large crowds of people around him cheering.
user2

I'm not saying Bidens the best president but he is definitely and improvement and at least acts like a president.
