Hey! :)
user1

Hello!
user2

Did you ever get a specific topic we were suppose to talk about? I didn't.
user1

The question at the top says "Who is more hypocritical, Democrats or Republicans?"
user2

And my answer is...Republicans. Undoubtedly lol
user2

An example I would use to illustrate this is the handling of the recent shooting in Uvalde
user2

Strange, I don't see that question anywhere. No doubt Republicans are more hypocritical. lol Between denying 1/6 to not protecting children in Texas exactly!
user1

Republicans say we are having a mental health crisis, and that's it's not the guns that are the problem. So then why are you all taking hundreds of millions of dollars from mental health funding?
user2

I can't believe the rhetoric of blaming the teacher for leaving the door open. I mean, at this point it's not surprising but man.. And Beto got heat for confronting them but I'm honestly happy to see someone legitimately outraged about it.
user1

Someone showing anger and being actually upset instead of giving a fake frown with 'thoughts and prayers!!'
user1

Exactly! We should give "thoughts and prayers", and don't make things "political" when they politicize every aspect of the lives of POC/women/LGBT+ community everyday
user2

I think hypocrisy is part of the entire makeup the GOP now. That is part of their entire identity. They say one thing and mean a much more sinister ulterior alternative.
user1

Even in regards to the insurrection on 1/6...Biden wasn't the "legitimately elected President", but somehow all of the Republicans that were elected on the ballot ARE?
user2

I think the same, and unfortunately their followers revel in it
user2

I honestly think they know they are being hypocritical, and they just don't care because they know they'll get away with it
user2

I loved to see the Uvalde parents refused to meet with the Governer of Texas. Good for them.
user1

For sure on 1/6. It's crazy the inconsistency. But that's the whole 'Big Lie' many fascistic leaders have employed throughout history. >:(big mad. haha
user1

It was a cathartic thing to see them refusing to meet with Abbott. They have gone through so much trauma and don't have the time to put up airs and pretend to be honored to meet someone that enacted policies that literally led to the shooting.
user2

Yup. And the sensible gun laws are not going to take guns away.
user1