I think that Republicans are more hypocritical. They constantly campaign on promises that they want to help those who are struggling, but block bills that would actually help those people.
user1

Well, after the killing of 21 people yesterday in Texas, I'd have to say the Republicans, lead by Moscow Mitch, would be the most hypoticritical.
user2

Absolutely! I don't know how he keeps being elected. I wish that more people would see through him and realize that they are just pawns to him.
user1

They have blocked gun purchase restriction legislation for TWO YEARS NOW! Yes, I'm shouting!
user2

I live in a very red state and am constantly shocked at how many people will blindly support Republicans. These people are barely able to get by in life and constantly re-elect the very people that are holding them back from living a fulfilling life.
user1

They are making sure American mass murderers are the best equipped murders in the world.
user2

I too am from a red state, Florida, where mini-Donald is the governor!
user2

It's absolutely disgusting that Americans have such easy access to the weapons that we do. We are quickly becoming the most violent county and it's ridiculous that no one in power seems to be doing anything to stop it.
user1

I honestly think that Republican leaders thrive on the separation of the American citizens.
user1

Weapons, yeah. Weapons of mass destruction should be reserved for our police and military only.
user2

It's heartbreaking how many Republicans don't seem to understand that they shouldn't be angry with Democrats, they should be angry at their own leaders.
user1

But you can't "unspill the water". They are already so prolific, you could never pull them back now. The damage has been done. This weeken Texas governor is campaigning with the NRA, go figure.
user2

It truly is a horrific road we're going down as a country.
user1

Another example, is the margin by which Marjorie Greene wond her primary, WFT is wrong with people?
user2

When I retire I'm moving to Canada, and just coming to the US for winters.
user2

Nice talking to you, the clock is about to run down. Bye.
user2