I think Republicans are more hypocritical because their talking points are more about pandering to their base than actually achieving anything.

For example they consistently talk about doing things for the good of the country, but their policies only benefit a select few of the population.

I think in general while both parties can be hypocritical, republicans are the more hypocritical because they tend to contradict a lot of their beliefs .
user2

Well said. Their pro life agenda seems to contradict other platforms
user1

Yes that ties into the formula shortage that the country is currenlty going through. They don't seem to be taking it seriously.
user2

It seems hypocritical to be both pro life and yet be so supportive of looser restrictions for guns
user1

also another good point
user1

I also agree that Democrats aren't perfect in this regard. However their seems to be a problematic habit in the Republican party user1

*there
user1

THat's a good point. Even with this recent school shooting, it feels like they are fine with those lives being lost, but say they are pro life.
user2

I think the republican party has gotten worse in the last ten years too so it's more noticeable
user2

I understand the idea of the 2nd amendment, but there seems to be a obvious problem in our country with guns
user1

yes, I've heard republican friends say that they don't even recognize the party anymore.
user1

I think even having some restrictions on how easy it is to get a gun would do some good, but even that is being fought.
