I think its the Republicans for sure! The one that annoys me the most right now is they claim to be the party of protecting life, that's why they support abortion. YET, they really don't care about the lives of children that are getting killed by assault rifles.

Yes i agree! Or how many republican's were very agaisnt the COVID vaccine yet were first in line to be vaccinated
user2

Thats absolutely right! I really don't see how the politicized a lifesaving vaccine, but they did. Apparently they Republicans only care about life if its certain types of people. If everyone has to get a vaccine to protect the weak or the infirmed, or the old, then its impinging on freedom!

Another hypocritical thing is that they only care about "Freedom" when its talking about their rights to not wear masks, or to own guns. They actually don't care about freedom, when it means having open access to voting and democracy. They're actively passing voter restriction laws in most of the red states.

Great point!
user2

Because as you mentioned earlier they truly only care about preserving freedom and rights for certain people and groups.
user2

Another thing I thing is hypocritical about the Republicans is that they claim to be the "Party of Lincoln". While that sounds nice and everything, Lincoln is actually the man that fought a war to free the the slaves, while the majority of the Republicans are fighting to keep up monuments of Confederates who fought AGAINST Lincoln.
user1

Yes! It's like we all learned the parties switched platforms in school so obviously someone wasn't paying attention,
user2

I also think its hypocritical of Republicans to call everything "Woke Culture". When really, the majority of what "woke culture" is, is pushing for equality of sexual orientation, gender and race. Realizing that we don't have current equality in the United states, and fighting for it. Its precisely what you said, they're only interested in protecting certain people and groups.

Another thing that I feel is hypocritical about the Republicans is that the majority of them claim to be "originalists" when it comes to interpreting the Constitution. That means, that they don't want to read rights or freedoms into the Constitution that the drafters didn't intend. So for example, they don't want to write in gay marriage or abortion rights. But they're perfectly willing to create a fiction about the second amendment. The second amendment doesn't allow anyone complete access to guns, its VERY specific.

it says "A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."
user1

Literally in the ORIGINAL text of the document, it is a "well regulated Militia". So you're telling me that the founders intended that that government could regulate guns with regards to the Militia, but not to the average citizens? Its a complete fiction that the gun lobby has created in the Constitution.
