Hello, what are your feelings on this topic?
user1

I think that both groups are hypocritical about different topics depending on the actions of the other party.
user2

I definitely agree with this, to say that it's one party or the other is not a fair assessment
user1

Both sides have done and said things that they haven't lived up to
user1

I think that it's also in retaliation to things that occur within parties. For example, the continual investigations into Donald Trump were important in my mind, but it also means that Democrats can't complain in Republicans continue to push for investigations of Democratic individuals in power.
user2

Yeah, it constantly feels like an ongoing game of verbal back and forth that unfortunately stalls out so much of the political process for everyone
user1

I've also seen a lot of Republicans make comments about physical appearance of Democratic women, but then complain when a comedian makes a joke about a Republican's appearance. It's almost like all the social aspects and back and forth has become more important than actually getting anything done.
user2