Hi. My name is Max. i would say that i think Republicans are more hypocritical in this current moment than Democrats. Republicans tout wanting to save lives as folks concerned about unborn fetuses; however, they do little to preserve life that is already here. For example, mass shootings continue daily and there is still inaction.
user1

Policies they have created have not shown a concern or regard for women's lives, or those who are survivors of rape and sexual assault.
user1

I think Republicans are more hypocritical
user2

The ongoing onslaught of legislation that attacks health care providers from providing accurate evidence based options and care does not preserve life nor does the legislation aimed at transgender folks across the country.
user1

I agree msamerica.
user1

I started to share why I thought they more hypocritical. What helped you come to your conclusion?
user1

I have grown weary of "thoughts and prayers" after national and regional tragedies that could have been prevented -- and suicides of youth that could have been prevented.
user1

They have the power to change things and leverage their power.
user1

When I saw the governor talking about having gun control I thought maybe its time for a change
user2

And, they simply don't.
user1

msamerica -- i'm not sure what you mean. Do you mean the TX governor?
user1

Im from california
user2

Ah! What did Newsom say about gun control? I missed it.
user1

I'm from NY; I was thinking of Abbot from TX where he offered not much more than "thoughts and prayers". So many children gone and the best Republicans can muster are thoughts and prayers. NY was not much better with the recent hate crime in Buffalo
user1