I feel like Republicans are far more hypocritical. This is demonstrated more than ever with the crisis in Ukraine. They applaud the people of Ukraine for standing up against Russia, but condemn the people of Palestine for doing the same thing

I feel like similar Republicans have often made statements and actions that contradict what they believe in and their behavior in general is something that can't be overlooked when trying to understand their character

Like how they feel about children! Republicans seem to always be trying to take money away from the education budget
user1

Or how they are against abortion but don't actually provide support for the mothers who are no longer able to get an abortion
user1

And yet they argue about other countries having better programs for education and their children not having the same opprotunties but they woun't foot the cost.
user2

Exactly! They would rather continually put money into the bloated military budget
