Hi.
user1

Hi!
user2

Would you like to begin, or shall I?
user1

You can begin!
user2

I would definitely say Republicans are more hypocritical than Democrats!
user2

On virtually any given day I'd say that the Republicans are most hypocritical. With the most current events - I mean senseless, evil shootings - I would say that the Republicans are even more hypocritical than usual. The narrative "A good guy with a gun can stop a bad guy with a gun" obviously isn't true/adequate for public safety. I heard interviews with gunowners in Texas on NPR this morning, and their justifications for keeping the laws as they are - or expanding gun ownership - were NOT logical! Hypocritical.
user1

Tha mass shooting in Texas broke my heart! Republicans are pro-life (anti-abortion) but they would not do anything to control the access to guns. They always reason it's about the mental issues in this country. There are other mentally unstable people in other countries, but do they have access to guns like we do. Do they have mass shootings like we do?
user2

Amen :-(
user1

Yes! I agree with you! They pretend to be very religious but they are not accepting of everyone! They are the most judgemental people actually
user2

Most Republicans I know are very self-righteous. For instance on my Facebook feed, all I see are thoughts and prayers. But if you look back on their other previous post, they are very proud of their guns!
user2

Now they have argued that schools need to be fortified. Some are faulting the school/teachers for not having a door locked. For Heaven's sake, it was Texas in May! How hot would it be? Why should students live without fresh air? And what if a teacher had a gun for protection? She didn't have body armor, and nor did the kids. Are they at fault for their own deaths? This is akin to the argument (more common among Repubs) that a woman is raped because of what she is wearing.
user1

I agree with you!
user2