Codebook to guide the replication of Araújo, Victor (2021). Do anti-poverty policies sway voters? Evidence from a meta-analysis of Conditional Cash Transfers.

“year” indicates the year of publication of the study/estimate.

“effect” indicates the original effect sizes collected from each study.

“sd_effect” refers to the standard error of the original effect sizes collected from each study.

“n_cases” indicates the number of cases used to estimate the correspondent effect size.

“t_stat” refers to the T-statistics of the correspondent effect size.

“part_corr” refers to the partial correlation of the correspondent effect size.

“part_se” refers to the standard error of calculated partial correlations.

“rct” assumes value 1 if the estimate/study is a randomized controlled trial, and 0 otherwise.

“pub_status” assumes value 1 if the estimate/study was published in a peer-reviewed journal, and 0 otherwise.

“pub_field” assumes value 1 if the estimate/study was published by a researcher from the field of political science, and 0 otherwise.

“pub_region” assumes value 1 if the estimate/study analyses the electoral effect of a CCTs in Latin America, and 0 otherwise.

“sjr_18” refers to the Scientific Journal Rankings (SJR) index, which expresses the average number of weighted citations received in the selected year by the documents published in the selected journal in the three previous years.