Data Coding Process

Clean the Data

1. Following Enders et al. (2011), events that do not match GTD's coding criteria are removed
2. Event carried out by unknown groups are removed
    a. Together this cut out over half of the observations 3. All aggregate groups are removed
    a. Aggregate groups include any group that is not listed as a "perpetrator" on GTD's website. In general, groups are excluded because they do not have an official name or they are described as a collection of people (e.g., Afghans)
4. Expand data so that they are group-event data (rather than only event data)
    a. Create duplicate events if there is more than one perpetrator, recode group name and ID so that each group that was involved in an event has its own observation (uniquely identified by eventid gid)
    b. Duplicates for the event ID and group name are dropped, as are cases with no group ID 5. All groups that only carried out one event are removed
    a. Note that this includes removing groups that only had one event that meets the criteria of the definition of terrorism
6. Excluded Groups, and the reason for their exclusion, are listed in the Appendix

Determine Each Group's "Home"

1. Rule 1: First recorded location attacked
2. Rule 2: Location attacked most frequently
    a. This is left as missing for groups that have targeted multiple places the same number of times
3. Rule 3: Nationality attacked most frequently
    a. Takes into account all three nationality fields
    b. This is left missing for groups that have targeted multiple nationalities the same number of times
4. Groups that where all three rules produce the same "home" are coded accordingly
5. Groups where two of three rules produce the same result are coded accordingly, but double checked
6. Groups where all three rules produce different results are coded manually, or excluded if the group appears to be international in nature (or no information could be found)
    a. 49 groups differed on all three coding rules

Transform to Transnational, Dyadic Data

Two codings of transnational are used. The first is that the "home" is different from the location where the attack takes place. The second is that the "home" is different from the nationality that is attacked.

1. Transnational according to location
    a. Determine if the home country is different than the location country
2. Transnational according to nationality

a. Determine if the home country is different than the nationality attacked (for each of the three recorded nationalities)
b. If the nationality listed is Multinational or International, it is coded as transnational
c. If the target sub type is listed as an international organization (e.g., UN), it is listed as transnational (targsubtype = 47)
d. If the target sub-type is listed as NATO-related, it is listed as transnational (targsubtype = 37)
e. If there are US killed, wounded, or kidnapped, but the event occurred outside of the US, the event is listed as transnational

3. Generate Dyadic Data
    a. Generate a list for each attack of the different countries that were targeted by the event, whether as the location of the attack or the nationality targeted
    b. For each of the countries targeted, generate a variable that indicates if the target was due to location, nationality targeted or both
    c. Generate dyads for each home-target pair, generate labels for whether the dyad is based on location, nationality targeted, or both
4. Deviations from ESG:
    a. Diplomatic targets other than IOs, as it was unclear if the embassy, family, or something differently was the actual target, which would have been captured in the nationality1-3 variables (83 observations)
    b. Multinational corporations not coded as it is not clear what significance the business has (e.g., an attack on a McDonalds in New Mexico) (278 observations)
    c. US killed, wounded, or hostages when attack not in the US are not included when the US is not listed as the nationality of attack (75 observations)
    d. Hijackings not considered transnational that started and ended in different countries (47 cases), as diversions may be the result of police operations rather than the original intent of the attack
    e. Total, there are 438 cases that ESG code as transnational that we do not; there are 1,604 events we code as transnational that they do not; and, there are 4,381 events both code as transnational
