corrected
uncorrected
Elections for political leadership in this country are:
Freely and fairly contested by various political groups
Biased in favor of the political group that currently holds power
Not held or Non−existent
Citizens' individual liberties, such as freedom of speech, religion, and assembly are:
Strongly protected by the law
Weakly protected by the law
Not at all protected by the law
When making decisions, the country's leader:
Must respect the legislature and courts' authority
Can sometimes bypass the legislature and courts' authority
Can almost always bypass the legislature and courts' authority
When making policies, politicians:
Frequently follow what the majority wants
Sometimes follow what the majority wants
Rarely follow what the majority wants
When citizens dislike their government's policies:
Most obey the government
Some obey and some challenge the government
Most challenge the government
The economic situations of the rich and the poor are:
Generally equal
Somewhat unequal
Highly unequal
The rights of men and women are:
Equal
Somewhat unequal
Highly unequal
Independent, non−elected experts have:
A great deal of influence on policy
Some influence on policy
Not much influence on policy
The people vote directly on policy decisions:
Frequently
Sometimes
Rarely
0.25
0.50
0.75
Marginal Mean