Bibliography for the Modern Conquest Dataset v2.1

Last updated: September 25th, 2019.

This document reports the main sources used to code the Modern Conquest dataset on a case-by-case basis. This list does not contain sources that were examined but not used. Documentation is not provided for the numerous cases that were examined but found not to include a conquest attempt.

In addition to the sources identified below, Wikipedia pages were consulted for all cases. However, no conquest attempt was included based on information from that source alone. Congruence between Wikipedia and a credible primary or secondary source was considered sufficient confirmation for a case. Disagreement prompted further investigation. Sources found to be unreliable are generally not reported. Interstate Crisis Behavior Project case narratives were also helpful in the early stages of identifying and beginning to code many cases.

Each case below is listed in bold, displayed in terms of the perpetrator against the victim, followed by the territory name. All conquest attempts are included, including retaliatory conquest attempts. Where the same source(s) were used to code consecutive conquest attempts, the source is only listed under the last of those consecutive cases.
