General Remarks

The database Political Parties, Presidents, Elections, and Governments (PPEG) combines data on election results and governments in 72 democracies in Africa, the Americas, Asia, Australia, and Europe. The current version covers the period between 1942 and 2021 and contains information on 3030 political parties, 1011 parliamentary elections, 338 presidential elections, and 1881 governments.

The data is separated in four different files:

- data on parliamentary elections to the national lower chambers
- data on presidential elections
- data on national governments
- combined data on national governments and corresponding parliamentary elections

You can download each of these datasets on https://www.ppeg.wzb.eu.

The Presidential Election Data includes information on presidential candidates, their political party affiliations, and their vote counts in the first and final round of the corresponding presidential elections.

In case of questions or comments, please contact ppeg@wzb.eu.

Notes on electoral systems

For elections with more than one round of voting, the results of the first and the last round of the corresponding presidential election are documented.

In Ireland, presidential elections are conducted by means of the alternative vote, analogous to the single transferable vote system used in other Irish elections. Here, the variables electorate, total_vote, valid_vote, and votes give the results of the first preference votes. The variables valid_vote_lastround and votes_lastround give the distribution of votes after the final count. While edate_lastround and electorate_lastround are identical to the values of the first "round", total_vote_lastround is set to missing.

Notes on candidates coded as "Others"

In the case of elections with a high number of presidential candidates (> 10), those contestants gaining less than 0.5% of the vote were subsumed in the residual category "Others".
