First off i loved the post TC i found it funny.

Secondly I love how people actually are still going on about RE5 being Racist. If anyone wants to look at the history of the myth of the Zombie then they would find out that it came from the Caribbean and Voodoo. The idea is that something is controlling the people in the villagers which does tie back to the Voodoo history of the Zombie.

Honestly i would have thought some people would have researched the origins of the genre before commenting on it

I think RE5 is genuinely race-confused. If you set a game in "unknown African country" you have the native people being either a) black b) arabic and black c) dutch settlers and black indiginous people and that's depending on where you are. In no part of Africa is there an equal blend of every race like the diversity wing of a skittles factory. Whomever complained about this, genuinely, is not worth listening to.

i think RE5 is now the opposite of racist now. Playing the demo it was so obvious they put in a hispanic, a white person, asians, in addition to all the native Africans in AFRICA. I mean its just dumb that Capcom caved in to be politically correct.

Funny thing is that people out there really take it seriously. You know, finding black people in Africa, Spanish people in Spain (if I remember correctly), who would have ever thought that they occupy those areas? /sarcasm.

Like someone else said i think that the only people crying over this are probably racist to some degree. When I played the demo I did not even think anything of the colour or ethnicity of thr guys I was shooting, as far as Im concerned they were all humans (well... zombies) and thats how everyone should think. The fact people are complaining about this game shows that they themselves aeparate different races and judge them differently.

So to the people whining, all humans are humans, peroid. No buts thats it. Now please dont turn this post on em and say RE5 is racist towards humans as an entire species :P

I love when people who can't even debate something as trivial as videogames properly, want to try and discuss something as complex as racism.

Note to internets: Learn the difference between "lose" and "Loose" first. I can't count how many times those two words are mixed up. Do that first then in maybe.....50 years, you can start a racism debate.

And yes I know this was a joke. I'm just tired of people bringing it up.

That's exactly why I'm upset Capcom is throwing races into RE5 that shouldn't be there. At first I didn't notice the evened out races, but I played the demo again and realized how unrealistic the population was. The game needs to stay true to the setting in that poor African villages primarily contain black or arabic people. Capcom shouldn't have succumed to political correctness. They should have stayed true to the setting. It's rediculous that they need to worry about stuff like that.

Ow racism exists everywhere, but a family being bullied away from their home because of the color of their skin is a whoooooole different thing than having Your race portrayed as something evil in a game. The first, that is human abuse. The latter, the latter is playing the victim. Everything gets ridiculed in a game, it is not representative of the truth.

I know it is sad. Being PC is just a less obvious way of being racist. I mean its obvious people in ethnic mointoities dont want to be treated badly but at the same time I doubt anyone would want someone being carefull what they say around them. Its still treating them differently. People just need to treat everyone the same. politely, not rudely. Bottom line, unless you walk in someone elses shoes, don't presume what they should and shouldn't be sensitive to. And if you don't care, hey that's okay too, but something just as bad as exaggerating racial matters is trivilizing racial matters. There's a stigma with racism in America and even in alot of European countries. Institutionalized racism existed as recently as 1964. Don't fall on either side of the extreme-trivializing it or exaggerating it. And respect everyone even if you dont understand how they feel about certain things. And oh yes RE5 for the WIN!
