I would say when I used my fire plasmid and went into the funeral home. Then went to my left and saw the mourner over the casket, I got a creepy ass vibe from that. Just the whole idea of being inside of a funeral home or morgue freaks me out, even though I work right across the hall from a morgue.

The dead body propped in the wheel chair was pretty freaky too.

And I almost forgot! When you face the doctor and he has the 3 people up, bolted onto the crosses with blood. Very religious and creepy vibes....

When you go into this morgue type place, and you see the shadow of a doctor, and when you approach, hes not there. and as you exit the area he pops out of a board in the wall

I heard a splicer and I was looking for him for like 5 minutes. All of a sudden I look back and he hits me with a wrench. I jumped 10 feet. Other than that, no. Its not a scary game.

That part wasnt scary. IMO the whole [redacted] was scarier but still wasnt scary.

Until you use that Power to the People. Turned around to see a statue right behind me then boom, "Hi Spider Splicer!"

Definitely the creepiest part of the game, when he gestures upward and the lights shine on the bodies hanging on the operating tables.

lol, once I picked up a trap bolt with telekenesis and threw it down a dark hallway, I heard the fzzzhhhtt! and assumed it fizzled out from the toss. I continue my trek and hear the standard big daddy moan, and ready my electro-bolt so I can stun him and get running; All of a sudden I see the multiple red circle indication of a pissed off bouncer. Certainly, I think; he can't be after me I didn't do anything; Then it hits me, the trap bolt I threw stuck him in the side or something :o He sprints at me and murders me in seconds; The second I realized I was his target I was just like "OH CRAP!" dead

When you are near the core room you walk in and the lights shut off and you hear splicers and they flicker back on, then i swore i saw some people running behind me and when you reach the end of the hall two splicers are pretending to be dead and they jump up and start charging you

It seems like a lot of people have missed it. But it IS possible to get the plaster statues in Fort Frolic to COME ALIVE. Turn your back to them, then turn around again for a good scare. You have to activate the event with a switch in one of the shops though, a little hard to find.

Yes, the switch is in that Sinclair store in Poseidon Plaza. It opens a cellar door, as you walk down, you see a plaster statue sitting in a chair in the corner. You go in and collect the goodies, then turn around to see that there's no one in the chair, and you guessed it, the statue attacks you.

I just beat the second level, but so far, it's a tie between (1) the first level when you pick up a tonic/plasmid and a crazy doctor is standing right behind you; and (2) Dr. Steinberg? "working" on a subject when the lights go out and he disappears only to jump back out at you from a fridge.

Definitely the doctor standing right behind you after you pick up the tonic. Just look at his face, he is freaking scary looking. That part where the lights went out made me a bit nervous but it wasn't too scary since you have a shotgun. Also, in that morgue area or whatever it is where you see the doctor's shadow and he's not there, then on your way out he jumps out from a cabinet, that made me jump.

3 times....

1.)One when you walk into a room and then there's mist and when you turn around a guys is right behind you.

2.)You walk into a room and theres a chick frozen in a wheelchair. You hack a safe and the you turn around and she is frozen 2 feet behind you in an "about to kill you pose", then you walk past her and she pops to life and attacks you.

3.)When people first started faking the fact that they were dead/

Yeah,deffinetly the scariest part for me was in the dentist office and as soon as you pick the diary,theres a splicer standing right behind you.I pulled out the machine gun and sprayed that nurse but Im sure I wasted a few rounds cause I just held down that shoulder button.

1. The shadow of a doctor working on a corpse and the lights flicker off and he vanishes. Only to jump out of the cabinet.

2. The shotgun scene.

3. I think the scene before entering Andrew Ryan's office. The splicers kept turning the lights on and off. Then the third time you see 3 laying splicers. They actually jump up and attack. The was pretty intense.

Towards the very end of the game where you need to get the big daddy suit. i went down into a pool of water that was about 3 feet high, and dude jumps out of the water as soon as i get down there.

1)i also got freaked by this but i didnt just walk in there i was fighting splicers and backed into the room running then turned around and theres 3 clay people all twisted and in weird positions

2)the doctor standing behind me was scary as well

3)also the part where ryan gases his office it wasnt that scary just unexpected when shes writing on the glass

4)just as you enter the poseidon plaza in fort frolic and all the frozen statues turn alive

the spider splicers sometimes catch me off guard too its freaky how they crawl across the roof backwards reminds me of the exorcist

So far, the steamy doctor's/dentist's room, where he stands behind you. I moved only a little after picking it up, and I saw something behind me, but I didn't know what it was. So U sat there and thought about it for a second, then realized it was a guy. One "Oh *!" later and my heart jumped to my throat. Awesome game. I like when the lights go out.

Oh, and when I was in the Farmer's Market, and a Big Daddy shoved me out of the way, and my electric discharge thing went off and hit him. I didn't know that made them angry, so I continued on until I turned around after hearing quick, heavy, angry movement. Saw the thing speeding towards me.

The dentist's office (the room with the fog) seems to be the crowd favorite.

It was extra creepy for me, dentist's offices do have sort of a creepy vibe to them (guy standing over you with a drill, you get the picture), and when the room fogged up and he disappeared, I knew he'd reappear soon. I saw the gene tonic in the corner, and I was certain he'd appear as soon as I picked it up. Instead, I picked up a diary recording right next to it first. My vision blurred and the screen fogged, and I was staring back at the gene tonic. I didn't really think anything happened, and I turned around just to be sure, and AHHH HE'S RIGHT THERE 2 INCHES FROM MY FACE! Naturally, I unloaded far more rounds of ammunition into him than was necessary. I guess it just really caught me off guard, I didn't expect him to show up after picking up the diary, only after the gene tonic.

That was the scairest part for me, but it was weird when he put the dead body on the table too!

A I think that I actually screamed a little when the corpses "woke up"

I have to say the scariest part of the game so far, is when I had to head down to the dentist office. NO, NOT THAT, BUT THATS NO FUN EITHER
On the way back, I exited out to the hallways, and the lights went out. I didnt get a good look of the place before, so I didnt know were I was. I started hearing all these crazies around me, and pulled out my recently found shotgun. So I ran for the small spotlight, and spun around like crazy trying to spot them. It was scary while it lasted, but none of them had any guns, so I was kind of lucky.
The second most scariest thing that happened, was when for the first time, I realized how smart the Big Daddy can attack. The scariest moment there, is when I got cornered in a cashiers booth, with the Big Daddy at the door. I barely got out of there alive, by jumping over the counter.

And the creepiest moment, was when I heard a splicer singing, the sunday school song, "Jesus loves me, this I know." And also starts cursing God, almost like he was eternaly damned in Hell. Basically thats what Rapture is to me, Hell. No rules, no Gods, JUST CHAOS!

that when I saw him my halo instincts kicked in and I shotgunned him in the face.

You kind of get used to all the scariness in the game so for me the scariest part of the game is the beginning of it when you're just getting introduced to the madness. That and finding whiskey in the toilet. Noooooooo!!!!!!

There is no madness without reason

Scariest part by far was when I Was in a cellar and getting a "Power to the People" machine and right when I turned around a Spider Splicer was Glowing behind me yelling. It was dark so when I turned around I practicaly jumped outa my chair.

top 3 scariest moments in descending order:

3. corpses coming back to life when you think they're dead
2. one of the first spider splicer encounters in the dark, when its crawling over the ceiling
1. when you finally find the shotgun, and all the lights turn off and you can hear splicers running around for that last one i actually just paused the game and didnt even play til the next day the lights just abruptly shutting off and hearing all the splicers just creeped me out lol *ps. give my bioshock review on my blog positive feedback if you have the time, i'd really appreciate it.

Same for me. I turned towards the right, saw there was no statue in the chair, kept turning and saw a new statue a couple feet away from me, striking an upward pose. Except it wasn't a new statue at all, but a spider splicer. I actually looked at it for about 3 seconds, then it started to move and attack me immediately. That was by far the scariest moment I've ever experienced in a videogame.

Haha, I know what you guys mean.

Except the thing is, for me, I was actually kind of more freaked out when the statues weren't moving, because it was like, "Aw come on, I know it's alive, and it could jump out any second, and I can't do anything about it..."

That Dental Office guy was damn scary. My first play-through, I picked up the tonic and the smoke started filling the room. I thought nothing of it and right when I turned around, this guy is just there staring at me. Scared me crap-less. On my second playthrough, right when I picked up the tonic, I turned around, but once the smoke clears, you are automatcally facing the desk. Guess the devs wanted to make sure you get scared lol. Another scary moment was in the funeral home. I went into the water, and two things scared me: This corpse just floating down towards me (I thought it would attack or something) and the shadow of the doctor on the wall. I stood there in the water for about a minute thinking if I should advance or not HAHA. Nonetheless,I did and saw nothing . Him popping out didnt scare me though.

medical pavillion was very "house on haunted hill" more disturbing than scary.

fort frolic was extremely creepy imo, my favourate part was actually when you complete sander cohen's masterpiece and he gets a spotlight focus as he walks down the staircase towards you im surprised this hasnt been posted yet but the scariest part for me was in arcadia when you first meet the houdini splicers.. theres one guy who runs away whenever you get a look at him. then there was like a shrine type thing with a wooden mask and a lockbox, once you walk up to it the light changes and he's standing right behind you and hes just like "hello" it was intense. plus the secret room in sinclair spirits is also creepy with the guy in the chair.. pickle surprise!

I've had "creepier" moments, but that had to be the most heart-stopping moment for me. The fog, you turn around, and he's right there, out of the blue. I think I physically clutched my heart when that happened. The closest thing to that was one time, I was picking something up and, because of the lighting, I could see the shadow of a splicer standing right behind me. He didn't move. I turned around, expecting him to be there(or not), and he was, and it still startled the crap out of me.
