What Gods should be in the next GoW?

Pushing franchise fatigue & nonsensical immortal protagonist aside...

...if another God Of War game was coming out down the road, be it Kratos or new protag, which mythos would you love to see him bring down to our level and butcher? If you still think Greek, then what is there left for Kratos/newguy left to murder?

My vote...albeit..not very politically correct, goes to Hindu gods. I have nothing against the religion or anything like that I just think, personally, that the designs that have obviously been passed around from Hindu to Hindu(like most god depictions) through time are the most surrealist I've ever witnessed. That isn't meant as an insult in any way but more of a fascination. (Googles Hindu gods) Check these out, and think about them amped up to either Titan(GOW3) or God like scale(GOW1) and these would be some absolutely fantastic set pieces:

(http://static.gamespot.com/uploads/original/1535/15358365/2455280-hindu_god_durga.jpg)

(http://static.gamespot.com/uploads/original/1535/15358365/2455281-indian-goddesses.jpg)

(http://static.gamespot.com/uploads/original/1535/15358365/2455284-vinayagar-14.jpg)

It's just the fact most seem to have more than 2 arms(at minimum) and several heads(or faces). There's also something so unnatural and unnerving about having blue or purple skin, that's just me though(creeps me out a little) Also getting weird Bayonetta vibes from most of them too.

I'm well aware that this game if made would be a global PR disaster but a guy can dream right? haha.

What other Gods take your fancy?

I seriously doubt they would use gods from a currently worshipped religion. Greek Gods are no longer worshipped therefore there's no controversy. They'd catch so much hell having boss battles with Jesus/Buddha/Muhammad.

I think it's safe to say we'll see the Norse pantheon after all the "Vikings" show promos were attached to the GoW: Ascension demo.

The public is already atleast mildly acquainted with them thanks to the Thor movies and Vikings TV show (I've never watched it).

In all honesty I think as long as Hinduism is a thriving religion it won't be touched. A religion has to be for all intents and purposes DEAD, except for the few oddball worshippers. It would be interesting though. Isn't Kali destined to destroy the world so it can be remade? And the god Krishna's tale is eerily similar to Jesus' tale.

I would actually like to see the Egyptian Pantheon, but setting it in the bronze age could be a problem for the weapons and armor. Not to mention the tale of Horus which is very similar to Jesus lol.

haha, yeah agreed. Shame though. Leaping from arm to arm on one of those Hindu gods would have been insane. They're big enough to design a whole level around them.

I see a lot of this. I think there's only so many giant nordic bearded men you could fight before it get's a lil samey though xD. Would be cool though.

Another favourite seems to be Egyptian too. I think the problem is trying to find a certain culture where the gods went down in history through art and recollection as being giant life forms towering over normal folk. Maybe that's one of the reasons why Ascension never really impressed, apart from the two fights between two giant bosses for the most part you were fighting 3 human sized Furies.

The Greek and Roman gods were basically the same. They just changed their names and modified their tales to fit into the Roman mindset.

I used to be a huge Egyptian culture sponge when I was younger. I do believe there were some gods who were giant, but also had animal characteristics. Most if not all Egyptian gods have animal characteristics. Also of note are Aztec, Mayan and Incan gods. Besides having names generally unpronounceable for the general population the also had some very grandiose, (and also viscious), gods. They're designs are also pretty interesting.

What kinds of weapon/armor issues would there be?

Horus has been a villian in a game before (http://www.gamespot.com/sphinx-and-the-cursed-mummy/), I don't think there was much of an issue then.

I don't want anymore Kratos. His story should have ended the trilogy, instead they milked 3 prequels out of us.

Hindu deities have been used in the Shin Megami Tensei games.

Some of the gods have blue skin but it's for artistic purposes. Krishna is actually very dark, so artists paint Krishna blue instead.

either way, it's a video game, and GOW at that. I don't think realism will a high priority.

Egyptian gods would be cool. Maybe even gods and creatures from several religions and mythologies.

I'm excited to see how SSM is going to do the GoW reboot. I hope we get a new protagonist but Kratos remains in the game, and is still playable in some way.

I would say Egyptian or Norse mythology BUT I only want a new GOW if they fundamentally change it core gameplay. Ex. Make it open world, introduce a serious inventory system, an upgrade system etc.

Nah! I hate Norse mythology. Not cool at all. Very generic designs. I don't know but I heard that Persian mythology is very brutal and full of gore, so may be that. I was very active at Prince of Persia forums a few years back and heard that back there.

idk about Allah, but Jesus is depicted as being both non-violent and a part of an omnipotent being.

The Olympians weren't immortal or omnipotent, the christian god is, meaning that, if he wanted, he could unmake you with a thought.

also, the game just wouldn't sell well.

Personally I would want more Kratos in a number of ways, some not necessarily to be the main protagonist.

1: Playing him without any emotional investment makes for a better game because technically all you're doing it playing this badass c*nt of a person who's really good at killing things. Makes for a variety of 'fuck yeah' moments, for me anyway.
2: If he was protag again I would want at least a suitable nemesis. Something of an equal that can at least bring Kratos down to his knees to damn near failure. Rival duels or battles are the best thing usually in video games. You're on equal footing and there is a higher chance of you losing.
3: Kratos is the antagonist and the new game is that you play someone new who is finally going to put an end to his status. That ending boss battle fighting him would be insane. If Platinum was making this it would be like the Senator Armstrong hard.

Ah the more you know I guess. I don't know why it creeps me out lol. I guess it just seems so unnatural, which would be fitting for a godlike being that may or may not have existed.

Lots of love for the egyptian ones. although looking at their designs there's not much going for them because all that's varied is the changing of the heads. Would be quite daunting though. Think the Eygptian gods are meant to be pretty unforgiving too.

Yeah, let's piss off a billion Hindus worldwide, that sounds like a great idea!

Hell, why not do Christian or Muslim mythology, while you're at it?

They're not going to touch living religions- the Greek, Roman, Norse, Egyptian pantheons are all parts of dead religions, they can do those just fine without much controversy (although even there, they did piss off a portion of the middle east). Using a religion that's still alive and well, hell, is one of the largest religions of the world? Jesus Christ you are asking for trouble.

Aztec/Mayan mythology. Plenty of gore and sacrifice associated with that mythos, so it would feel right at home in a God of War game.

I'm not certain why people are worried about Hinduism making a scene. Asura's Wrath for instance combined elements from Buddhism and Hinduism to make a decently fun game.

Edit: And even with Christianity, we look at Dante's Inferno. Sure, we don't have to face Jesus or God, but facing off against Satan's hordes? Not seeing a problem with that either.

Norse mythology is the logical choice. Or never extending the story from the end of GoW3, just keep telling tales from kratos' life. I'd rather see a human kratos from his time as a spartan general. Before the ashes turned him white and before he made the oath to Ares Kratos should definitely deal with an alien invasion. We need the scale to exceed the earth at this point.

Reinventing the series based off Norse mythology would be epic, it would also help to replace my memories of Too Human

None of them.

Put that boring ass series out of its misery already. Let that studio do something new, and not boring. Emphasis on new and not boring.

And for those interested in Hinduism in video games need to check out SMT: Digital Devil Saga.

Using a religion that's still alive and well, hell, is one of the largest religions of the world? Jesus Christ you are asking for trouble.

Like I've said earlier, the Shin Megami Tensei games uses Hindu gods as designs for demons. Shiva, Vishnu, Parvathi, Hanuman, Yaksini etc. Atlus uses a wide variety of characters that are based on real religions too. Archangels Gabriel, Michael, Lucifer/Satan and they even used Jehovah as the last boss in SMT II :\

Atlus has avoided negative press so far. But I recall reading negative press about Fallout 3 because it had mutated cows called Brahmin (not a good idea, because the Brahmin are the upper-most class in the Hindu religion). Fallout 3 is not banned here in India though.

In the Middle East, God of War was banned because you kill "gods". This is an example of a game that uses a dead religion but still ended up getting banned. Heck, even Dubai banned God of War. And Dubai is pretty much the least restrictive Arab state out there :\

there is no way to introduce new gods into this world. Kratos killed everyone and basically destroyed the world. This series should stay dead forever but it seems that Santa Monica are a one trick pony. I hope they come up with a new IP and not a freaking GOW reboot or something. =/ they were working on a new IP..... but they Todd Pappi left and a few months later everyone got fired and the IP got canned. They're in limbo right now.

Naughty Gods.

The characters created will be the sons and daughters, and then the actual creators, breaking the 4th wall, will be the final bosses in at least a six part epic series.

The entire studio isn't in limbo. Their still working on at least two projects. The Order 1886 and Cory Barlog's new project, which may or may not be a new GOW game. Stig's team may have lost their new IP but the majority of that team is still at SSM working on other projects.

Mainly because those religions don't feature a plethora of Gods to add story and drama to the game, not to mention multiple godlike foes. The other religions being mentioned have dozens.

What, kill 10,000 humans on your way to one final battle with a God?

You can kill angels and demigods. Before you fight god you can kill Jesus that can shoot nails at you, Noah who can shoot at you 2 of each species or whatever, Moses who can throw tablets at you, Different Popes who are dead and now Angels each with their own power, Kings like King James or other religious figures, etc.
