It needs to be more important than it was in vicky 2.

"It needs to be more important than it was in vicky 2."
I'd argue that it is less important in a Cold War game.

I'd argue that Islamic fundamentalism/terrorism started/expanded in the cold war.

You could do that with event chains and militancy modifiers though, on a case by case basis. Certainly easier than integrating a religious system complicated enough to produce these effects dynamically, even if it means we won't ever be getting Mormon suicide bombers.

Also, don't forget IRA

IRA was also about nationalism thrown in, though religion played a role which manifested itself in national identity.

Just because Islamic Fundamentalism began in this time period doesn't mean that it was highly significant. Pollution and environmental degradation are important and began heavily in the Vicky 2 time frame, but they're not represented.

It should effect internal politics, to some degree thought the amount and direction is difficult to determine. It many have taken a rightward bent in some places, such as Afghanistan. On the other hand though we have Liberation

[Suggested Economics Model] Fair Model

Theology in South America. I believe culture and economic conditions are more important.

I have been considering giving POPs a Religiosity value to model degrees of religious fervor, and whether separating this from just Conservatism/Order would be worth the increased interface/player mind-space load.

It will be represented precisely as it was in Victoria 2.

what about iran?

[–] biverix 4 points 2 months ago

What about Iran?

permalink source save-RES parent

[–] golako 1 point 2 months ago

It was a theocracy after the revolution, a quite different form of goverment than the rest

[–] biverix 1 point 2 months ago

Well, yes, but the topic was POP religion, not theocracies as such. Theocracies existed before Iran as well, e.g. in the time period of Victoria 2.
