Control Panel Subscriptions TOS Privacy @NeoGAF Theme

Welcome LAWJ

NeoGAF
BELIEVE

Post Reply

Page 3 of 3 ← 1 2 3

GAMING Community OFF-TOPIC Community

Jewish Video Game Characters : Page 3 Subscribe

Morrigan Stark
Arrogant Smirk
(03-02-2014, 05:04 PM)
Quote

#201

> Originally Posted by Dictator93
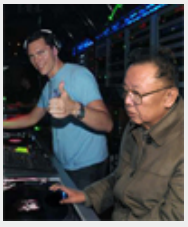
> No, jews are not nazis. You are twisting my words and intentions. Rather, Monolithic understandings of faith and ethnicity advanced by certain people in this thread are fascist.

So they're not nazis, they're facists. Got it.

Except, they're not, by any stretch of the definition of the word "fascist". Absurd garbage.

djtiesto
is beloved, despite what anyone might say
(03-02-2014, 05:05 PM)
Quote

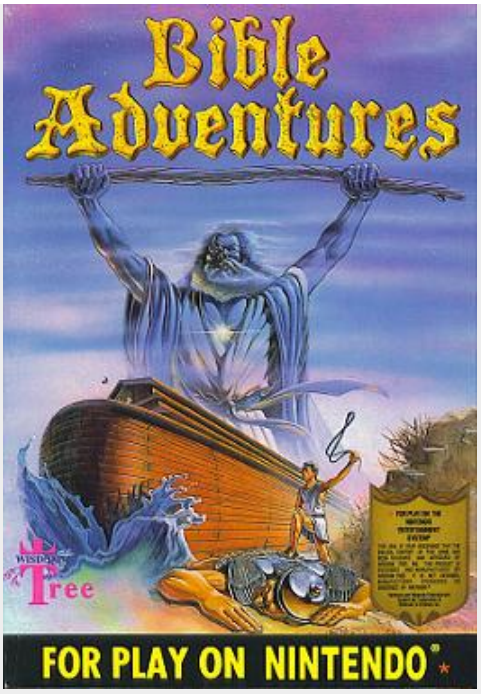


#202

If we're going by "Jewish-sounding last names", Yunica Tovah.

What about Einstein? Did he show up in any games? Civilization perhaps (I never played the series)?

And you guys are forgetting this classic game starring David, Baby Moses, and Noah:



Apart from last names that sound vaguely Jewish, that Shivah game about the rabbi, and games that feature representations of actors/actresses that are known to be Jewish, it's really hard to quantify.

Dictator93
Member
(03-02-2014, 05:06 PM)
Quote

#203

> Originally Posted by Morrigan Targaryen
> So they're not nazis, they're facists. Got it.
> [redacted]

They are not fascist.

The origins and meaning in their arguments are fascist (perhaps the better word is crypto-fascist).

harriet the spy
Member
(03-02-2014, 05:09 PM)
Quote

#204

> Originally Posted by djtiesto
> What about Einstein? Did he show up in any games? Civilization perhaps (I never played the series)?

(Red Alert)

Kinyou
Member
(03-02-2014, 05:17 PM)
Quote

#205

> Originally Posted by FiggyCal
> :/ Why would there need to be? Couldn't we assume that 20 % of all characters in videogames are Jewish. Call of Duty soldiers as far as we know could all worship on the sabath.

Anyone can assume what they want. That's the great part when the characters religion isn't defined.

Silky
Banned
(03-02-2014, 05:19 PM)
Quote

#206

> Originally Posted by SuperAngelo64
> Has nobody mentioned Vincent?

"Brooks" is a pretty common Ashkenazi jewish surname. He even has the jew fro going on.

These things...don't mean..he's--

Nope. Nope. No mas. Buh-bye.

Dictator93
Member
(03-02-2014, 05:20 PM)
Quote

#207

> Originally Posted by W!CKED
> No. Differentiation does not mean discrimination. Being different is not bad.

Classifying someone as different for arbitrary reasons is discrimination. That is what I am talking about. Nothing wrong with being different.

That is what happens when you advocate ancient understandings of race or ethnicity. They have basis other than an ideological one.

AllIsOneIsNone
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:03 PM)
Quote

#208

I'll clear a couple things up for you guys just for future arguments' sake.

If your mother is jewish then you are jewish, but only according to the jewish religion.

Judaism is both an ethnicity and a religion. I'm ethnically jewish but not religously.

Some jews do tend to find the term "the jews" derogative with the 'the' on the front. It's akin to "the blacks".

Sorry, this is way off topic but i figured since people were getting stuck on a couple of things.

It would only make sense that bj blazkowicz was a jew right? That's how I played wolfenstein anyway! "Shabbat shalom mother fuckers, your day of rest is right here in my hand!"

Last edited by AllIsOneIsNone; 03-02-2014 at 06:36 PM.

ShinobiFist
Banned
(03-02-2014, 06:08 PM)
Quote

#209

> Originally Posted by AllIsOneIsNone
> I'll clear a couple things up for you guys just for future arguments' sake.
>
> If your mother is jewish then you are jewish, but only according to he jewish religion.
>
> Judaism is both an ethnicity and a religion. I'm ehtnically jewish bit not religously.
>
> Some jews do tend to find the term "the jews" derrogative with the 'the' on the front. It's akin to "the blacks".
>
> Sorry, this is way off topic but i figured since people were getting stuck on a couple of things.

It has been explain by others on why your points are wrong. Read the previous page.

AllIsOneIsNone
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:14 PM)
Quote

#210

> Originally Posted by ShinobiFist
> It has been explain by others on why your points are wrong. Read the previous page.

Erm, which ones? I read the whole thread.

Rimon-hanit
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:16 PM)
Quote

#211

Well I can't think of any modern cultural representation but the Darcsen in VC is based on the jewish persecution in europe.

Romars202129
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:19 PM)
Quote

#212

> Originally Posted by Tookay
> I love how there is an acceptable - almost casual - disregard for representation on this forum for certain types of peoples, but not others.

Yeah... I've been told I could be more sensitive about certain issues myself...
But you're kinda crossing the line here neogaf, and not just the guy Tookay is quoting.

SuperAngelo64
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:32 PM)
Quote

#213

> Originally Posted by ShinobiFist
> It has been explain by others on why your points are wrong. Read the previous page.

Well then others are wrong?

According to the Talmud (the ultimate rabbinic source) jews are chosen as long as it's in the bloodline,

Granted, the majority of jews (ashkenazi) in the world, especially in the west, have little to no Semitic/middle-eastern blood it doesn't make them 'not jewish' since the classification is justified in a faith-based belief system. Technically anyone can be a 'jew'. Just because we have a stereotype of the eastern european 'white skinned, curly haired' jew does not mean that they can't believe in a bloodline. It's like saying only ethnic Greeks are 'Christians'.

Dictator93
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:37 PM)
Quote

#214

> Originally Posted by W!CKED
> No. Forced equality is discrimination. Accept and love the difference.

I never said anything about forced equality though. Nor did I imply it. I was talking about arbitrary classification.

My quote:

> Classifying someone as different for arbitrary reasons is discrimination. That is what I am talking about. Nothing wrong with being different.

I am for embracing difference, but against typifying/objectifying/reifying classifcations.

Last edited by Dictator93; 03-02-2014 at 06:41 PM.

BaronLundi
Member
(03-02-2014, 06:58 PM)
Quote

#215

Some of you are talking out of your asses.

It IS both (either) an ethnicity and a religion. I know a lot of atheist/agnostic Jews.

And according to jewish canon you are jewish if your mother is jewish. Shouln't be that difficult to grasp.

Vulcano's assistant
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:00 PM)
Quote

#216

The Dark Souls ones are cracking me up.

Last edited by Vulcano's assistant; 03-02-2014 at 07:20 PM.

MagnaderAlpha
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:01 PM)
Quote

#217

> Originally Posted by Wasp
> I always thought Jews are a race or an ethnicity as well as a religion.

Ethnic-wise, native Hebrew people(originated from Israel), are no different than any other Middle Eastern people. The true main difference from that region is the ideas and laws as written under their different religions(which the cultures, not ethnicity, are based around). As ethnicity is concerned, you can say the native Hebrew people and native Muslim people are "cut from the same cloth".

Last edited by MagnaderAlpha; 03-02-2014 at 07:07 PM.

SuperAngelo64
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:02 PM)
Quote

#218

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi
> Some of you are talking out of your asses.
>
> It IS both (either) an ethnicity and a religion. I know a lot of atheist/agnostic Jews.
>
> And according to jewish canon you are jewish if your mother is jewish. Shouln't be that difficult to grasp.

According to the Tanakh it's passed through the father's bloodline. "Shouldn't be that difficult to grasp".

Dictator93
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:03 PM)
Quote

#219

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi
> Some of you are talking out of your asses.
>
> It IS both (either) an ethnicity and a religion. I know a lot of atheist/agnostic Jews.
>
> And according to jewish canon you are jewish if your mother is jewish. Shouln't be that difficult to grasp.

Think of the ramifications of this. Then think about extending this logic to any other parts of a religious canon.

Then think of further ramifications.

This line of reasoning is rather absurd.

> Originally Posted by SuperAngelo64
> According to the Tanakh it's passed through the father's bloodline. "Shouldn't be that difficult to grasp".

Thank you for pointing out the whole arbitrary classfying stuff. I am not sure why people are so apt at taking ethnographic classifcations from psuedo scince or dogmatic religion at its word so easily.

ShinobiFist
Banned
(03-02-2014, 07:07 PM)
Quote

#220

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi
> Some of you are talking out of your asses.
>
> It IS both (either) an ethnicity and a religion. I know a lot of atheist/agnostic Jews.
>
> And according to jewish canon you are jewish if your mother is jewish. Shouln't be that difficult to grasp.

So if the mother is African American, but was raised in the ways of Judaism or converts and the Father is Asian. That makes the kid a "jew" of the bat? Even if he doesn't embraced the religion growing up?

AllIsOneIsNone
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:11 PM)
Quote

#221

> Originally Posted by MagnaderAlpha
> Ethnic-wise, native Hebrew people(originated from Israel), are no different than any other Middle Eastern people. The true main difference from that region is the ideas and laws as written under their different religions(which the cultures, not ethnicity, are based around). As ethnicity is concerned, you can say the native Hebrew people and native Muslim people are "cut from the same cloth".

This is true for any people if you go back far enough, and maybe it's less far back for what you're referring to. But the fact that there are Sephardic, Ashkenazic and Mizrahim jews shows there are separate ethnic divisions. If you don't fall in one of these categories then you aren't ethnically jewish.

> Originally Posted by ShinobiFist
> So if the mother is African American, but was raised in the ways of Judaism or converts and the Father is Asian. That makes the kid a "jew" of the bat? Even if he doesn't embraced the religion growing up?

You're misinterpreting what both he (and I) are saying. He's saying it's jewish canon, so it depends what perspective you're coming from in that regard. Also I think it's really hard to convert if your spouse isn't jewish, so your example would be incredibly rare.

Last edited by AllIsOneIsNone; 03-02-2014 at 07:16 PM.

Dictator93
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:17 PM)
Quote

#222

> Originally Posted by W!CKED
> 1. You said that classifying (...) is discrimination, which is wrong.

1. Actually I did not say this. I said:

> Classifying someone as different for arbitrary reasons is discrimination

ARBITRARY CLASSIFICATION. Classfication and information reduction is how we get around as humans in the world. I have no problem with classifying, it is unbased classifications that i have a problem with.

> Discrimination is an action triggered by a stereotype or prejudice. Classification alone is not discrimination. An action that is triggered by this classification is discrimination. The problem with your argument is that it is a prejudice: you think that Jews will discriminate according to these classifications.

2. I agree that discrimination is triggered by a stereotype or prejudice. The thing is, the history of scientific and culture classifying is completely 100% entwined with stereotyping and false foundations (whether biological or ideological). We have come to realise this in the social sciences over the last half century and have been trying to break open our reified ideas of culture and ethnicity.

Also, I did not say or even imply I think jews will descriminate with this classification. But rather, that everyone who accepts this classification, subtely discriminates. One of my first posts points out the diversity I see among people who identify as jewish.

> 2. There is nothing bad about classifications if they are true (like in this case). You don't accept difference because you don't realize that.

3. You think you have shown proof of jewishness with this? "a jew is a jew through his or her mother"

as you put it:

> In general, Orthodox Judaism considers individuals born of Jewish mothers to be Jewish, even if they convert to another religion.[31] Reform Judaism views Jews who convert to another religion as non-Jews. For example "...anyone who claims that Jesus is their savior is no longer a Jew..." [Contemporary American Reform Responsa, #68] etc.

because a group of ultra-dogmatic religious types say so? If you think that is proof, you have to reexamine perhaps what is acceptable as empirical or even as analytical proof.

> You use all these words (typifying, objectifying, etc) pejoratively.

4. In regards to humans, those types of classifications are potentially dangerous. Humans are subjective understanding creatures. They are NOT on an indivdual basis a typified, objectified object. Those terms may describe their internal biology, but not them as a "person."

Also, I use those terms because they describe what has happened in this thread. Our history and false scientific understanding has reified these terms into becoming concrete realities. So much so, that you are not even questioning them.

Last edited by Dictator93; 03-02-2014 at 07:36 PM.

BaronLundi
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:20 PM)
Quote

#223

> Originally Posted by SuperAngelo64
> According to the Tanakh it's passed through the father's bloodline. "Shouldn't be that difficult to grasp".

No, only a minority (Karaites) believe that (and that only the Tanakh is source of law). But if you want to challenge the official interpretation of the Torah then by all means.

> Originally Posted by ShinobiFist
> So if the mother is African American, but was raised in the ways of Judaism or converts and the Father is Asian. That makes the kid a "jew" of the bat? Even if he doesn't embraced the religion growing up?

I'm really not sure on the stance about the offspring of mothers who convert... But I'd say sure, if she did manage to convert (which is quite a feat for anyone) then chances are her children would be jewish (or at least would be considered as such by most if no tall religious groups, and by the State of Israel). And if the kid doesn't believe in god or want to embrace another religion afterwards then what? So be it. That's exaclty what I did, I'm still an agnostic jew and I still don't see the problem.

These kind of questions are what rabbis are for. Go ask one?

But that's the religious side of things. For the ethnical side... well, you can't convert out of (or into) that.

Last edited by BaronLundi; 03-02-2014 at 07:28 PM.

obonicus
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:23 PM)
Quote

#224

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi
> No, only a minority (Karaites) believe that (and that only the Tanakh is source of law). But if you want to challenge the official interpretation of the Torah then be my guest.

There is no official interpretation of the Torah.

SuperAngelo64
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:25 PM)
Quote

#225

> Originally Posted by AllIsOneIsNone
> But the fact that there are Sephardic, Ashkenazic and Mizrahim jews shows there are separate ethnic divisions. If you don't fall in one of these categories then you aren't ethnically jewish.

But the fact that "Ashkenazim" literally means that you're a descendant of Japheth (and not Shem, which is where 'Semite'/Shemite comes from) means that the majority of jews are not even ethnic hebrews, many jews don't even know that. It's essentially arbitrary.

I just thought this was a fun thread to seek out the euro Ashkenazim archetype in gaming that we're used to from movies (The Jerry Seinfeld/Adam Sandler type). 'the fuck is going on?

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi
> No, only a minority (Karaites) believe that (and that only the Tanakh is source of law). But if you want to challenge the official interpretation of the Torah then be my guest.

Please list where in the Torah or Talmud it makes reference to maternal lineage in the same vein it makes countless references to paternal lineage. Also remember that the Talmud is the official scholarly resource according to Judaism of how the Torah (including the Tanakh) should be interpreted.

> Originally Posted by obonicus
> There is no official interpretation of the Torah.

While there may be no pure 'translation' of the Torah, there is a definitive 'interpretation' of the Torah known as the Talmud. Ask any Rabbi.

Last edited by SuperAngelo64; 03-02-2014 at 07:30 PM.

AllIsOneIsNone
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:30 PM)
Quote

#226

> Originally Posted by SuperAngelo64
> But the fact that "Ashkenazim" literally means that you're a descendant of Japheth (and not Shem, which is where 'Semite'/Shemite comes from) means that the majority of jews are not even ethnic hebrews, many jews don't even know that. It's essentially arbitrary.
>
> I just thought this was a fun thread to seek out the euro Ashkenazim archetype in gaming that we're used to from movies (The Jerry Seinfeld/Adam Sandler type). 'the fuck is going on?

Interesting. Haha, yea, it's probably going to be locked pretty soon.

BaronLundi
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:30 PM)
Quote

#227

> Originally Posted by obonicus
> There is no official interpretation of the Torah.

Sure, would you be more comfortable if I said that's the way the overwhelming majority of Jews, Jewish religious organizations and the State of Israel interprets the Torah ?

Cabal
Member
(03-02-2014, 07:33 PM)
Quote

#228

> Originally Posted by SuperAngelo64
>
> I just thought this was a fun thread to seek out the euro Ashkenazim archetype in gaming that we're used to from movies (The Jerry Seinfeld/Adam Sandler type). 'the fuck is going on

Yeah, this thread has turned into an OT discussion on Judaism. Not all that fun anymore, but it is interesting reading.

BaronLundi
Member
(03-02-2014, 08:07 PM)
Quote

#229

> Originally Posted by SuperAngelo64
> Please list where in the Torah or Talmud it makes reference to maternal lineage in the same vein it makes countless references to paternal lineage. Also remember that the Talmud is the official scholarly resource according to Judaism of how the Torah (including the Tanakh) should be interpreted.

I'm not trying to argue about the correct (religiously, historically or otherwise) interpretation.

Just saying that matrilineal descent has been canon according to the majority of jewish religious groups. On a personal level it doesn't really matter. My daughter isn't jewish according to that canon, but she definitely has a jewish heritage, which matters.

> Originally Posted by Cabal
> Yeah, this thread has turned into an OT discussion on Judaism. Not all that fun anymore, but it is interesting reading.

Let's look at the brght side, it hasn't turned into a middle-east political thread and that's quite a feat. Anyway, enough sidetracking for me, I'm replaying the Last of Us prologue to find Joel's yarmulke.

jcm
Member

#230

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi

(03-02-2014, 08:12 PM)

Quote

> I'm not trying to argue about the correct (religiously, historically or otherwise) interpretation.
>
> Just saying that matrilineal descent has been canon according to the majority of jewish religious groups. On a personal level it doesn't really matter. My daughter isn't jewish according to that canon, but she definitely has a jewish heritage, which matters.

Yes, my wife's father is Jewish, and her mother is not. As she points out, that's Jewish enough for anti-Semites to dislike her, but not Jewish enough for many Jews to consider her a member of the tribe.

jacobeid
Member
(03-03-2014, 12:06 AM)

#231

Quote

> Originally Posted by Morrigan Targaryen
>
> lol. I'm a woman but thanks :P

Ahem my apologies. This woman speaks the truth :P

> Originally Posted by pooptacular
>
> How come all the villains in max Payne 3 had all Jewish last names like Becker and Bachmeyer even though them dudes are in Brazil? I loled at that shit.

There are over 100,000 Jews in Brazil, which for our population is a fairly sizable group there. It's not entirely implausible.

Lots of ignorance and misinformation in this thread. Judaism and Jewish law are both extremely dense topics and a lot of the accusations/misunderstandings are due to misinformation.

People need to chill out about the whole matrilineal descent thing, some posters talking about it like it has some huge ramifications for the world. It's just how the religion is passed down according to Jewish law. It's not like we're rounding those with Jewish mothers who don't practice Judaism or associate themselves with the religion and throwing them into the Yeshiva.

Plot Twist

My father is Jewish. My mother is not. I was raised Jewish, Bar Mitzvah'ed, and go to a Conservative Shul. I spent a decent amount of time in Israel last year, nobody said anything to me about my "half" Judaism. Only the Orthodox are really that nitpicky about any of this. Deep breaths everyone.

Morrigan Stark
Arrogant Smirk
(03-03-2014, 12:56 AM)

#232

Quote

> Originally Posted by ShinobiFist
>
> It has been explain by others on why your points are wrong. Read the previous page.

Yeah, do tell the actually Jewish person why his knowledge of Jewish tradition is wrong. e_e
Are you for real?

> Originally Posted by BaronLundi
>
> Some of you are talking out of your asses.
>
> It IS both (either) an ethnicity and a religion. I know a lot of atheist/agnostic Jews.
>
> And according to jewish canon you are jewish if your mother is jewish. Shouln't be that difficult to grasp.

It's really not. But some people seem to think that makes you a fascist, apparently.

Darkmakaimura
When keeping it nerdy goes very, very wrong.
(03-03-2014, 02:50 AM)

#233

Quote

> Originally Posted by Xater
>
> All those supposed "Jewish" names that TV/Film etc. writers come up with just sound German. So if you have a German sounding name outside or Germany you are Jewish, that's > apparently what media has taught people.

Certain names and whatnot may imply an Ashkenazi Jew. Of course, like it's been said not every -Berg or -Stein is of Jewish descent.

Ezalc
Member
(03-03-2014, 02:53 AM)
Quote

#234

> Originally Posted by sublimit
> Isaac in Golden Sun. :p

What?

DrSlek
Member
(03-03-2014, 03:03 AM)
Quote

#235

You can play Jewish rulers in Crusader Kings 2.

staticneuron
Member
(03-03-2014, 03:26 AM)
Quote

#236

> Originally Posted by Dictator93
> Religion is dogmatic, it is an organisation. Faith is reflective metaphysics.
>
> Also, although Neitzsche denied the biological foundations from natural selection on Races (which modern sceince has also denied), he was for a hierarchy of races from a cultural dominance perspective. They are both separating negative connotations of race.

Faith is confidence or trust in a person (as in their ability), thing, deity, in the doctrines or teachings of a religion, or view.

Miguel81
Member
(03-03-2014, 05:47 AM)
Quote

#237

WTF....I thought we were supposed to be listing Jewish characters, not talking about the Jewish religion/ethnicity or whatever. Anyway, I think Billy Coen from Resident Evil Zero is the most badass, other than Johnny from GTA IV TLAD.

solid mike
Member
(03-03-2014, 06:58 AM)
Quote

#238

SImeon from GTA V

Springy
Member
(03-03-2014, 12:38 PM)
Quote

#239

> Originally Posted by solid mike
> SImeon from GTA V

I'm actually curious what makes you think this. I thought he was Armenian. Is there a reference to this in the game I've forgotten?

breakfuss
Member
(03-03-2014, 01:17 PM)
Quote

#240

Not sure why but I've always assumed Otacon was Jewish. Don't think it's ever explicitly stated.

jacobeid
Member
(03-03-2014, 02:30 PM)
Quote

#241

> Originally Posted by Springy
> I'm actually curious what makes you think this. I thought he was Armenian. Is there a reference to this in the game I've forgotten?

According to the GTA wiki, he is Armenian.

I could see why the poster thought he might be Jewish. Simeon is an extremely popular Jewish name that started when the Romans were in control of the Levant and has lasted until now. Simeon is simply the Greek version of the Hebrew name Shimon, son of Jacob and Leah. The GTA V character's last name, Yetarian, should have given away all the Armenian signs.

Darkmakaimura
When keeping it nerdy goes very, very wrong.
(03-03-2014, 11:23 PM)
Quote

#242

> Originally Posted by breakfuss
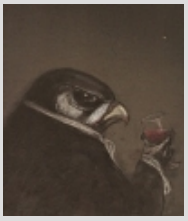
> Not sure why but I've always assumed Otacon was Jewish. Don't think it's ever explicitly stated.

I saw a couple places where they theorized on Hal Emmerich being Jewish. I've known a few Jewish girls who looked a bit similar to Emma if that counts for anything.

Again, I guess it's worth repeating but here's one who's no doubt Jewish.

Oh, there's also Sweet Tooth from Twisted Metal. Jaffe himself said it or hinted at it on Twitter awhile back although my Googlefu is not having an easy to finding it.

Deified Data
Banned
(03-04-2014, 12:08 AM)
Quote



#243

The Darcsen race are basically Jew expies in Valkyria Chronicle's larger WWII-lite setting.

FuriousDark
Banned
(03-04-2014, 12:16 AM)
Quote

#244

Scrooge McDuck

jakomocha
Member
(03-04-2014, 12:33 AM)
Quote

#245

> Originally Posted by Zoggy
> maybe i'm just weird and irrational but i don't feel comfortable when people refer to jewish people as "jews" > calling or referring to someone as a "jew" seems derogorative and pejorative. seems like a like a slur, (but i know its probably not).
>

I'm Jewish [redacted], Jew is by no means a slur. Just a short-hand version of the word. Under almost all circumstances I would say "He's/She's a Jew" not "He/She's Jewish". It's easier and more casual. The only time it could be found offensively is if someones says "the Jew(s)" or something like that.

> Originally Posted by INDIGO_CYCLOPS
> The Shivah, a point and click adventure game published by Wadjet Eye. Only game I can really think of.

Heard about this game before. Is it any good? Maybe I'll give it a try.

Anyways, under most (but not all) cases I don't really think religion should matter to a game. There are hardly any characters in video games who have a clearly defined religion, let alone are Jewish.

kneePat

Member
(03-04-2014, 12:39 AM)
Quote

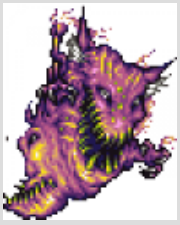
#246

How about the Nephite hero, Helam, in http://www.helamonline.com

More info here about this unique Jewish video game character!

Last edited by kneePat; 03-04-2014 at 12:42 AM.

chupon
Member
(03-04-2014, 01:31 AM)
Quote

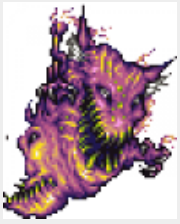


#247

I'm cheating on these:

Dr Zoidberg

chupon
Member
(03-04-2014, 01:34 AM)
Quote



#248

Also Harley

Metal Gear?!
Member

#249

(03-04-2014, 11:35 AM)

Quote

> Originally Posted by Currygan
>
> Brucie Kibbutz
>
> Dr Isaac Kleiner
>
>

Gordon Freeman

Darkmakaimura

When keeping it nerdy goes very, very wrong.

(05-04-2014, 05:23 AM)

#250

Kind of a bump, but I discovered another confirmed Jewish video game character.

Quote

In Quest for Booty, he mentioned he received a GPS as a Hanukkah gift from his mother.

Also confirmed that there are Jewish robot pirates existing in other universes. Maybe one of the lost tribes of Israel or something.

Coolade
Member
(05-04-2014, 05:27 AM)
Quote

#251

nowai
Member
(05-04-2014, 05:33 AM)
Quote

#252

> Originally Posted by Seraphis Cain
>
> .

Haha fantastic.

mastrbiggy
Member
(05-04-2014, 05:48 AM)
Quote

#253

> Originally Posted by Burning Vigor Attack
> Religion is usually avoided in video games unless it's a fictional one.

Does not compute.

GAMING Community OFF-TOPIC Community TOP

Post Reply

Page 3 of 3 ← 1 2 3

All times are GMT +1. The time now is 04:37 PM. | You last visited: 09-30-2015 at 11:15 AM

Contact Us